Today's Game

By LONNIE BURT

Sports Information Director Florida State University

Wake Forest Coach Bill Tate says now that his club has jelled he would "like to start the season all over again."

In their first two games, the Deacons were whipped 24-10 by Virginia and 34-7 by Maryland. They dropped their next two contests by a total of 11 points.

Tate figures his squad began to come around when sophomore quarterback Ken Erickson went to work under the center.

Last Saturday's 21-7 victory over Memphis State shows just how far the Deacons have progressed since the start of the campaign.

Today's Campbell Stadium game shapes up as a contest between Wake Forest's fine rushing game against Florida State's passing attack. In tailback Andy Heck, the Deacs have one of the Atlantic Coast Conference's best runners.

The 5-9 senior is second in the ACC in total rushing yardage but his 4.9 average is the conference's best. Erickson's combined total of 789 yards rushing and passing makes him fourth in league figures.

Two of Wake Forest's top defenders are tackles Robert Grant and Bill Overton. Both had outstanding games last week against Memphis State, as did cornerback Butch Baker. Tallahassee won't be a strange spot for Baker and Grant since they're both Jacksonville natives.

In Gary Pajcic and Kim Hammond, Florida State Coach Bill Peterson thinks he has as good a one-two quarterback combination as there is in the country.

Hammond relieved Pajcic during the third period in last week's Syracuse game and hit 11 of 16 passes for 131 yards. He tossed for one touchdown and his aerials helped set up another. Pajcic, who has completed 108 of 201 passes for 1,292 yards this season, had pitched for one TD before turning things over to Hammond.

If Ron Sellers' shoulder has healed enough so that he can play today, Florida State grads will see one of the top young receivers in the nation. The lanky Jacksonville native is within shouting distance of the great Fred Biletnikoff's season reception record of 57. "Jangle Joints" has 47 catches for 671 yards and he got only three against Syracuse before leaving with a separated shoulder.

This will be the seventh meeting between Wake Forest and Florida State with the Seminoles owning a 4-1-1 edge. In the last two meetings (1963 and 1965), the Seminoles won by identical 35-0 scores.

Champions of the Future

By JIM SELMAN

Tampa Tribune Assistant Sports Editor

You're sitting among more than 30,000 others in Doak Campbell Stadium today and you're part of a growing football program at Florida State University.

Look around. Remember when 5,000, 10,000, 15,000 came to homecoming? Soon now, another 10,000 seats may be added to this stadium. Then, crowds of 55,000 will see the big games here and there will be more of the big ones because the increased attendance will bring them.

Florida State has been playing football only 20 years, 15 in the major ranks. Few schools have climbed this fast. Not so long ago the Seminole defense was among the best in the country, then came a Gator Bowl win. This year the offense is nationally ranked and there aren't many football teams playing this exciting pro-type offense as well as Florida State.

Today, the Seminoles try to win their fifth game and assure at least a break-even season, if not 6-4 which is far superior to what had been expected of this sophomore-dotted team.

But this is a brash, saucy, upstart bunch of Seminoles who have emerged fairly well without much given to them.

To come back at all from the disappointing finish with Florida required a lot of courage, but it was done overwhelmingly well.

One of the young Seminole coaches, charged mostly with producing freshmen, told me a year ago, "we're building a national champion here."

He may not be far from wrong because 21 of the 47 who have done most of the playing this year are sophomores and another 10 are juniors.

But Florida State football is not going to continue to flourish without you. Recruiting the new talent is difficult in the face of the competition.

The FSU alumni ranks are comparatively thin, though growing steadily. You need to make more noise in your home area.

With quarterback Gary Pajcic passing, flankerback Ron Sellers catching, halfbacks Bill Moreman and Larry Green running and guard Del Williams blocking, you've got an explosive, exciting football team.

With Mike Blatt at linebacker, Frank Pennie at tackle, Larry Pendleton at middle guard and Marty Kolbus at safety, you've got a tough team.

So enjoy it today, 1966 homecoming.

And support it tomorrow for a better 1967.

Have astronauts made pilots old hat?

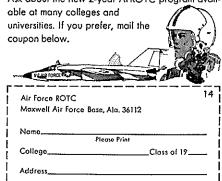

Sure, the boys who go off the "pads" get the big, bold headlines. But if you want to fly, the big opportunities are still with the aircraft that take off and land on several thousand feet of runway.

Who needs pilots? TAC does. And MAC. And SAC. And ADC.

There's a real future in Air Force flying. In years to come aircraft may fly higher, faster, and further than we dare dream of. But they'll be flying, with men who've had Air Force flight training at the controls. Of course the Air Force also has plenty of jobs for those who won't be flying. As one of the world's largest and most advanced research and development organizations, we have a continuing need for scientists and engineers.

Young college graduates in these fields will find that they'll have the opportunity to do work that is both interesting and important. The fact is, nowhere will you have greater latitude or responsibility right from the start than on the Aerospace Team—the U.S. Air Force!

Interested? The place to find out more is at the office of the Professor of Aerospace Studies, if there is an Air Force ROTC unit on your campus. Ask about the new 2-year AFROTC program avail-had great quarterbacks.

West Virginia outtouchdowned Pitt, 63-48, one disbebelieving editor wired back, "Get that Western Union operator off the bottle and give me the correct score!"

A great many changes have been taking place in college football over the years, and those two divergent results certainly point it up.

'Way back in the Depression Days of the '30's, money was not the only hard thing to come by. Touchdowns were mighty scarce, too. Now, they often come in bunches.

How come?

There are several theories, but most of the nation's finest football brains agree that the old "Punt-Pass-and Prayer" era has given way to four new "P's."

"Passing, Platoons and Pictures." they say, "add up to Points!"

West Virginia and Pitt were not the only college teams busy scoring last fall. The National Collegiate Athletic Bureau reveals that a 32.1 points-per-game average was posted in major contests during 1965. That's better than two and a half touchdowns per team,

Paul (Bear) Bryant, who's been cranking out championship teams with regularity at Alabama was always known as "Mr. Defense" until recently when Joe Namath and Steve Sloan began authoring a bushelful of touchdown passes. 'Bama's 39-28 conquest of Nebraska in the last Orange Bowl game emphasizes this dramatic turn of events,

"The past couple of years," Bear haven't played much defense. Probably because we have used our best letes playing offensively, rather than defensively. It is plain to see how this works to the advantage of the offense."

Notre Dame's Ara Parseghian feels strongly about the effect the return of platoon football has had on scoring. "The players have more time to specialize in their skills," observes Ara, "and a coach can utilize completely the individual ability of his players. And we also have more players today, due to the increase in population. The players today are bigger, stronger and faster."

Dartmouth's Bob Blackman, who has had such distinguished success in the Ivy League, thinks scores have mounted because "we have been better able to anticipate what our opponents will do on defense than on offense. Most teams will stem from one basic defense. On the other hand, it is very easy for a team on offense to run from several different formations from which they had run the previous week, and to also put in several completely new plays that they haven't shown before. Coaches also feel freer to make a change in offense than on defense, on the theory that if you make a mistake on offense, you may lose five yards. but if you make a mistake on defense it may give your opponent six points."

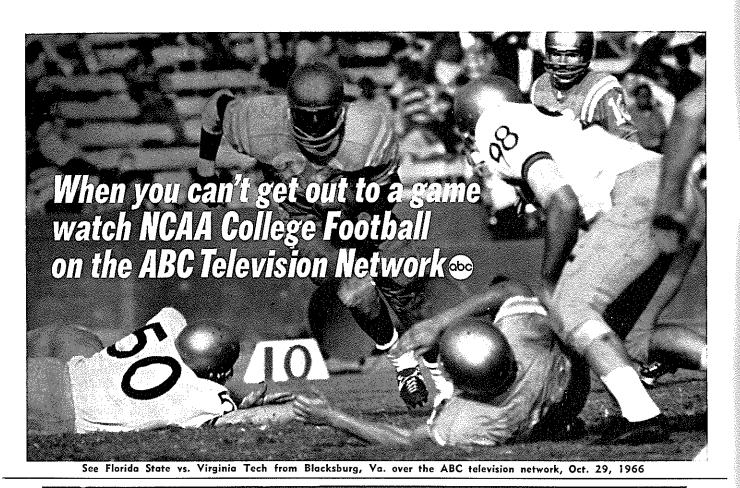

Ohio State's Woody Hayes, master of the "Three-Yards-and-a-Cloud-of-Dust" school recognizes "that defensive trends have taken a great deal of our offensive initiative away from us. We are no longer able to grind it out on the ground; thus the need for a passing game arises, and the increased use of the passing game has made for more scoring. Also, we have gotten more plays per game by mixing it up more which in turn gives us more opportunities to score."

Dad may have courted Mom back when a buck was a buck and when one touchdown won a ball game, but no more. "We used to think 14 points," the coaches chorused. "would win a game, but now we know we need 21. And 28 to be sure."

Sounds like a good many Western Union operators may be accused of drinking before this season is history.

Campus Headlines and Coming Events

A WORD FROM ALUMNI PRESIDENT HARRY MASSEY . .

The thousands gathered in Campbell Stadium for the 1966 Homecoming football game represent far more to Florida State University than just a group of excited gridiron fans. They are visual evidence of the growing body of sons and daughters of the University. Each year the number of alumni who return to campus for Homecoming grows by fantastic proportions. Ten to twelve thousand of those present this weekend come from the University's alumni family. With such support and interest, we are assured of continued fulfillment of the mission of your Alumni Association to serve higher education and our Alma Mater.

In the midst of this fine weekend, I pause to express the appreciation of the alumni to the faculty, staff, and students for the hard work and diligent effort they have put forth to make this occasion truly a Homecoming to remember for all of us. To President Champion, I renew our pledge of continued support. Under his outstanding leadership, the future cannot help but provide a champion year every year at Florida State.

Tensi and Biletnikoff—A Victory Combination

By BILL BUNKER

Former Sports Information Director

Bill Bunker

It was one of those times when dreams come true, and the very memory of it still stirs the blood. It was the year of excitement, color, and success—a year to remember when the others have been relegated to hard type in the record book.

Although 1964 is only two years gone, it is already an unalterable part of the legend and tradition that is football at Florida State University.

For this was the year it happened, the year the hopes and aspirations of the underdog became a force to be regarded with awe. The overall story has been well-recorded—the 9-1-1 record, a first victory over Florida, a triumph in the Gator Bowl. Within the patina of success, however, are the smaller individual triumphs that supply the building blocks of a deeper than obvious satisfaction.

The focal point of that season was one of the most devastating passing combination ever produced by a southern football team. Steve Tensi and Fred Biletnikoff left the Gator Bowl turf arm in arm and walked into the Florida State record books. They were, and always will be, an entity in the minds of Seminole fans, as indivisible as apple pie and vanilla ice cream.

Neither was a ready-made star, and few realize the long hours of practice these two spent in making the difficult look easy. Tensi in particular had a rough way to go that year. Public sentiment was divided as to the big fellow's ability, and though he broke Florida State's all time total offense record on his first pass completion of 1964, he had to prove himself to a lot of people during his senior year.

Prove it he did—to 11 opponents, the Gator Bowl selection committee, professional football, and finally to the Florida State fans.

Tensi was found by accident when a Florida State recruiter went to Cincinnati, Ohio to look at another quarterback, Roger Staubach by name. The two were opponents that day and the Seminole coach came away with the utmost respect for Tensi, who incidentally turned down some 70 offers to attend Florida State.

Biletnikoff was another story. Considered too small for college football, he was given a scholarship to Florida State after being passed over by most of the big colleges in his home area of Eric, Pa. It was a chance, but one which gave Florida State its first All

Outside of their obvious physical ability, the thing that set Tensi and Biletnikoff apart was the feeling on the part of the observer that each knew what the other was about to do. Florida State fans came to sense "the bomb" when Tensi took the ball from center. Was there any doubt in anyone's mind that a touchdown was on its way when Tensi dropped back into the pocket that first time against Florida?

More than the actual performance of the two, it seems that the anticipation of what could happen caused a large part of the excitement generated by the 1964 Seminoles. An example of this came in the Houston game, when Biletnikoff was sidelined with a painful charley horse. Tensi's passing was as good as usual and split end Don Floyd did a magnificent job taking up the slack, but somehow the electricity was missing, and it was just another ball game.

As is the case many times, the personalities of the two were totally different. Tensi reminded one of an overgrown kid, friendly, outgoing, easy to talk to. Biletnikoff was the more intense type. You could almost feel the energy coiled inside, looking for an outlet. Modest to a fault, both seemed embarrassed at the attention he received.

If Tensi and Biletnikoff received most of the attention and credit for Seminole success, there were other elements in 1964 which made Florida State one of the nation's most colorful teams.

Biletnikoff and Tensi Share MVP Gator Bowl Award

"The Seven Magnificents" they called themselves, and a brasher bunch of upstarts never lived. Laughter and scoffing was the reaction when tackle Avery Sumner first promoted shaved heads for the Seminole defensive line, but by the third game Florida State was the only major college football team in the country which hadn't allowed a point on the scoreboard.

Pride was their byword, and they lived fiercely on Saturday. The first touchdown scored against the Seminoles in 1964 brought tears to the eyes of the "Seven," though the score at the time was 48-0 in favor of Florida State.

Tensi and Biletnikoff broke almost every record the Gator Bowl had on that banner afternoon against Oklahoma, but who can forget the goal line stand by the Seminoles in the final moments? Oklahoma was on the short end of the final 36-19 score, and another touchdown would have made no difference one way or the other. The Sooners wanted it to save face before a national TV audience, but they were denied by one final display of the pride which characterized the "Seven Magnificents" throughout the 1964 season.

Also taking a secondary role were the members of an offensive line which allowed Tensi to be thrown for a loss while passing only six times the entire season. This is the group which told Steve he could wear a tuxedo before the Florida game. In typical Tensi fashion, the FSU quarterback's first words following the game were:

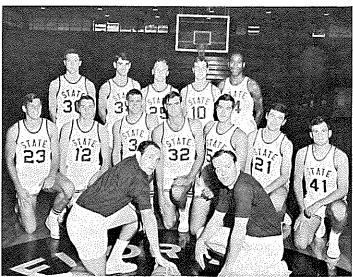

"I could have worn a tux, that's how good my protection was."

Though some will deplore reminiscence as backward thinking, it's good to reach back for past success occasionally if for no other reason than to regain confidence in the fact that what has happened once can happen again.

It happened in 1964.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE

At a time when education has claimed its rightfully important place in this country, Wake Forest College has staked out its own claim to extraordinary accomplishment and excellence, particularly in the last decade.

An institution with the usual rich trappings of tradition, Wake Forest has made unusual strides in recent years. It has had, as have other colleges, the impetus provided by Russia's sputnik and the subsequent wave of public interest in education.

Additionally, it has had the unusual experience of moving 110 miles from its original site to its present new campus at Winston-Salem, N. C. The move and the growing interest in education stimulated a chain reaction which has made Wake Forest one of the outstanding institutions in the South.

Wake Forest was founded in 1834 by the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina in a grove of trees sixteen miles north of Raleigh, the state capital. Enrollment that first semester was 16 but the college grew and prospered.

In 1946 the college encountered a new opportunity when the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation offered to pay Wake Forest $350,000 annually if the friends of the college would provide necessary buildings at a site in Winston-Salem. The grant was increased to $500,000 annually in 1956. Ten years later the college made the historic move and now occupies a new campus valued at more than $25 million. The Bowman Gray School of Medicine of the college had been moved to Winston-Salem in 1941 when it received the resources of the Bowman Gray Foundation.

Wake Forest consists of the following divisions: the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Law, the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, the School of Business Administration and the Division of Graduate Studies. The College and its schools are approved by the standard accrediting agencies. The College has chapters of the principal national social fraternities, professional fraternities and honor societies, including Phi Beta Kappa.

The College believes that its emphasis on the basic liberal arts is the avenue to training for successful living whatever the graduate plans to do. One of the attractions Wake Forest offers to the exceptional student is an honors program which has two phases. One crosses departmental lines and consists of such courses as Approaches to Human Experience, Darwinism and the Modern World, The Ideal Society, Romanticism and the Comic View. The second phase of the honors program is departmental and is reserved for highly qualified majors who undertake research projects and are given a comprehensive oral examination.

Each year the college attracts outstanding speakers and entertainers. It also offers a number of art exhibits and a series of the world's best movies.

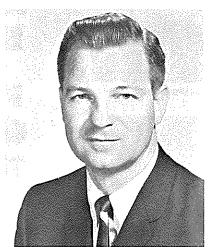

The college, which now has an enrollment of about 3,000, distributes over $250,000 in the form of scholarships. In the School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Business Administration and the School of Law they range up to $1,500 annually and in the School of Medicine up to $4,800 annually.

Wake Forest participates in all major intercollegiate sports. As a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, it competes with some of the best teams in the country. Its 1961-62 basketball team ranked third in the NCAA finals. An extensive intramural program is offered for all men and women.

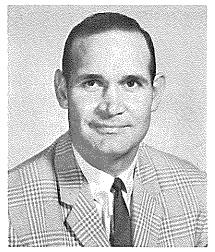

Wake Forest's current president is Dr. Harold W. Tribble who is the 10th man to lead the institution since it was founded.

MUSIC AT HALF-TIME

The band plays "Dixie" to welcome back alumni and friends. The Chiefs salute Dr. Karl O. Kuersteiner, professor and former dean of the School of Music, with the march from "Carmen" and excerpts from the New World Symphony by Dvorak. The band presents concert versions of music from Bach to Stravinski to honor Dr. Manley R. Whitcomb, founder of the current Marching Chiefs. For Dr. Ross R. Oglesby the band plays "Blue and White," one of the more than 100 songs he has written. Honoring Dr. John E. Champion, President of the University, the band salutes a "Champion" year in sports with "Mr. Touchdown," and a "Champion" year in education, with "Pomp and Circumstance." The Homecoming Queen and her court are presented to the music of "Queens Fanfare." Honoring the students and faculty of FSU, the band plays the school's Fight Song and Alma Mater.
