What is now Auburn University was founded in 1856 as East Alabama Male College, a private liberal arts college supported by the Methodist Church.

The Alabama Conference—what essentially is now the Alabama-West Florida Conference—of the Methodist Church decided to build a college somewhere in central Alabama. The exact location came down to a battle between Methodists in Greensboro and Methodists in Auburn. The Greensboro Methodists came up with more money to support the school and the Methodist school, Southern University, was built in Greensboro, not far from what is now Tuscaloosa.

Not to be outdone, the Auburn Methodists kept working and on February 1, 1856, East Alabama Male College was founded in Auburn. The college opened its doors on Oct. 1, 1859 to 80 students.

The college at Auburn has prospered and grown and now, as Auburn University, ranks as Alabama's largest institution of higher learning. More than 18,400 students are expected to enroll at Auburn this fall.

Southern, the original Methodist college, did not fare as well. Hard times forced the Greensboro school to merge with Birmingham College and form Birmingham Southern College, which is located about a block away from Legion Field in Birmingham.

East Alabama Methodists were unable to support their financially troubled college after the Civil War and gave it to the State of Alabama in 1872. The Legislature renamed the school the Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical College and made it the state's land grant college.

Women and football came to Auburn in the same year, 1892, and Auburn men have been pursuing each with varying degrees of success ever since.

The college was renamed the Alabama Polytechnic Institute in 1899 and Auburn University in 1960. Both changes came in recognition of the institution's expanding academic program. Auburn currently has ten undergraduate schools offering degree options in 173 areas. The Graduate School administers programs in a total of 187 master's degree areas, 96 doctor of philosophy areas, 41 educational specialist areas and 25 doctor of education areas. Through its divisions of Instruction, Research, and Extension, Auburn daily touches the lives of every Alabamian and people throughout the nation and world.

Auburn's multi-million dollar plant on the main campus is composed of 62 main buildings located on 1,871 acres.

The City of Auburn, in Lee County, was incorporated in 1838. It is 50 miles east of Montgomery, 120 miles southeast of Birmingham and 125 miles southwest of Atlanta, Ga.

A branch campus, Auburn University at Montgomery (AUM), has been in existence since 1967 and has more than 5,100 students enrolled this year. AUM is located on a 500 acre tract in eastern Montgomery.

Auburn Head Football Coach

Auburn's Pat Dye is one of the nation's eminently successful young coaches.

In two short years as athletic director and head football coach, Dye has Auburn back in the bowl business and back in the running for the national championship.

The Tigers were 9-3 in 1982 and beat Boston College in the Tangerine Bowl. Auburn was ranked in the Top 20 for the first time in years.

It is not a surprise that Pat Dye has been successful at Auburn. He has been successful everywhere he has been.

Dye's teams have won 68 of the 101 games they have played. One ended in a tie. That means Dye-coached teams have won more than two out of every three games they have played.

Dye succeeds through discipline, hard work, dedication, preparation and loyalty, the qualities that have served him well throughout his life.

Dye learned those qualities on a farm in the little town of Blythe, Ga., near Augusta in the late forties and early fifties. Football was a part of his life then as it is now and it has always been closely aligned to his understanding of the qualities that lead to success.

As a boy, he used to get up before day, do his share of the family chores, then hitch a ride to town on a milk truck so he could play football.

Dye's dedication to football, especially the intangibles of football, earned him a scholarship to the University of Georgia where he played football under the legendary Wally Butts.

The Bulldogs won the SEC championship during Dye's junior year, 1959, and he was named an All-America, an Academic All-America in the classroom and a bona fide All-America guard on the field.

After a tour of duty with the Army, during which he received the Timmy Award—comparable to the Heisman Trophy—for being the outstanding football player in the armed services, Dye began his coaching career under the legendary Paul "Bear" Bryant at Alabama.

During Dye's time at Alabama, the Crimson Tide won 80 games, played in nine straight bowl games, won four SEC championships and two national championships.

He became head coach at East Carolina in 1974 and success followed him again. The Pirates won 48 games under Dye, lost only 18 and tied one.

East Carolina became one of the national leaders in offense and defense and competed on par with the more established programs of the ACC.

He went to Wyoming in 1980 and success followed him there, too. The Cowboys had not had a winning season in five years and only one in the last 12 years. In Dye's first and only season at Laramie, the Cowboys were winners again.

He had always dreamed of coaching in the Southeastern Conference and when the Auburn job came open, he went after it, heart and soul. He was named head coach in January of 1981 and athletic director in May of 1981.

Dye made few promises when he was named head coach. He promised Auburn would have a disciplined football team and a conditioned football team. He promised Auburn people and the players themselves that Auburn would have a game plan each week that would provide the best chance of winning every time they went on the field. He promised Auburn people they would have a football program with the class and integrity they deserved. He promised those things and nothing more.

The goal, however, was obvious: bowl games and championships. Dye wanted to return Auburn football to the success it had known in the mid-fifties, late sixties and early seventies. Step one was realized last year with a victory over Boston College in the Tangerine Bowl.

Two seasons into his career at Auburn, Dye is well on the way to achieving his and Auburn's goal.

Dye's record at Auburn is 14-9, 9-3 last year and 5-6 in 1981, a year in which he missed being named Coach of the Year in the SEC by only one vote.

Overall, Dye has a 68-32-1 record, 48-18-1 at East Carolina, 6-5 at Wyoming and 14-9 at Auburn.

Dye is married to his college sweetheart, Sue Ward, and they have four children, Pat Jr., 21, Missy, 20, Brett, 17, and Wanda, 13.

'One Additional Step'

by Wilford S. Bailey

My few months of service as interim president have been very rewarding, and certainly the most challenging and exciting of my career. This service is "but one additional step" in my relationship with Auburn University, a relationship spanning 45 years—as student, faculty member, and administrator—providing me with a broad perspective on this university and higher education.

The rewards of this service are related primarily to close associations which have developed with thousands of Auburn people. They include some of the finest and most capable students anywhere, faculty and staff who are dedicated in service and committed to excellence, and outstanding alumni and faithful Auburn friends. Such people, and the unparalleled Auburn spirit, make this institution very special.

Auburn's unique character is manifested in many ways—perhaps none better than the Auburn Generations Fund, our current capital campaign to raise $61.7 million. The funds secured in this campaign will be used for construction of teaching and research facilities, for the purchase of laboratory equipment, and for endowments for student scholarships, faculty development, and library resources. Because so many Auburn supporters recognize their university's great contributions and understand its destiny to exert ever greater impact upon our state and nation, we expect this campaign to have exceeded its goal by the end of 1984.

Such dedication and exceptional effort must be maintained on a continuing basis if this institution is to reach its full potential. A great university does not occur naturally—it is molded and nurtured most carefully and deliberately by the existence of a well-developed supporting environment. This environment embodies widespread recognition of and respect for creative teaching, research, and extension faculty; stable sources of funding; and vigorous and imaginative leadership. The absence of any of these will restrain a university's movement toward greatness.

Maintaining the proper mix of elements is always difficult, particularly in periods of economic stress. For example, severe funding limitations during recent years have hampered our ability to improve existing programs and develop new ones. As a result, our response to the needs of business and industry has been hindered at this critical period in the economie development of our State.

Fortunately, it is not in the nature of Auburn people to withdraw from difficult situations. We have always made the best of less than ideal circumstances, while working to improve conditions in the future. There will be many challenges to address in the coming months and years, but I am confident that we shall not be distracted from our ultimate goal: A comprehensive university, offering programs of excellence and engaged in activity important to the State's development and to the welfare of its citizens.

Auburn's people always have been its foundation. Because of that sustaining base, I have every confidence that this institution will continue the progress which will allow it to take a position among this country's finest universities.

AUBURN'S NEW LEADER — After 45 years as a student, member of the faculty, and administrator, Dr. Bailey was named interim president on March 1.

Auburn Status Report: The Offense

By Jack Crowe
AU Offensive Coordinator

This week, Auburn offensive coordinator Jack Crowe gives an in-depth look at the Tigers' offense—past, present and future. Look for a report on Auburn's defense in a later issue of Auburn Football Illustrated.

This fall we tried to go into the season the way we finished up against Boston College. I think most people would agree that our personality in the Boston College game was the one we'd like to see—a good mixture of run and pass, play action and I guess as much as anything, the threat of the deep pass.

We came into the season with the idea of throwing the ball upfield pretty often, thinking we had some speed that other people would have a hard time contending with. But at the end of the first game against Southern Miss, we dropped a ball or two and didn't get protected well enough. It happened again against Texas. We threw eight times in the first half against them and completed only one in the 18 possessions we had. We wasted the majority of our offense with the passing game.

We sat down and took a good look at ourselves. What we found was that we were forcing the passing game, that we had gotten away from the style of offense that had been successful for us. That is, a passing game that was a complementary passing game.

We decided to go back to that type passing offense against Tennessee. It fit, anyway, and it was a good time to do it. Tennessee was defending the deep pass against everybody because of several young defensive backs they had. We didn't try to throw the ball deep against them. We used a control passing game and tried to move the ball with our running game first, instead of trying to create passing situations and force the pass. We looked out there and if we saw we needed to throw, we threw it.

In our first two games, we were looking for passing opportunities. We felt we had such a big threat that we had to get it thrown. We got a little distracted in the Texas game because of that reason, because of a couple of big plays they made and because the defense was getting moved on a little. We lost perspective of getting the ball to Bo (Jackson) and Lionel (James). Going in, we thought the worst thing we could do was force the ball to those two. We felt we had to get quality runs from them, rather than a large quantity of runs.

People talk about those two getting the ball. Last year, they both averaged right at seven yards a carry. Look at Herschel Walker and some of those other big name backs. They only averaged a little over four yards per carry. With Lionel, you can't punish him that much. He has to be a quality runner—get the ball to him at the right time with a lot of open field and let him use his ability as a little back.

We have really treated Bo the same way. Even though he's a big back, he is more of a finesse runner than a power runner. Generally, we have taken the approach that we want those guys to produce quality runs and not just feed them the ball.

Against Tennessee, though, we took a different approach with Bo. We forced the ball to him on some plays where he was going to be surrounded—in the thick of things. It worked well, because of him and the way our tight ends played. The number one play we called against Tennessee was

Status Report

Our offensive line for the most part has done what has been expected of them this year. Our offensive linemen had an excellent day against Tennessee. They graded OK against Texas, but we gave them blocking advantages with our schemes which were high percentage blocks. We tried to control the game a little bit with the passing game and finesse our way into the perimeter, rather than doing the one on one base blocking like we did against Tennessee.

We always try to put our offensive linemen in a position where they can win. Even when we don't play good sometimes—it might be our passing game isn't going well, or the quarterback doesn't execute well, or our backs aren't blocking the way they ought to—one thing you will never see is our offensive line being dominated. The reason is because we have so many tools in the wishbone to give them a chance. The more you take off them, the more burden you'll place on the backs blocking and the quarterback reading, if that makes sense. We like it that way, because we want our linemen to have top priority in doing their jobs. If they succeed, then everyone else has a better opportunity to do their job.

We are 200 percent better than at this point last year. We have confidence throwing the ball. Our backs are blocking so much better on the perimeter than they did last year. Randy (Campbell) is a more consistent quarterback. But we have to get a little better running the ball inside, and improve our base blocking.

We just have to become a better balanced football team. There has never been a truly balanced wishbone team. There has never been one you could put in the category of a Nebraska, for instance. The reason Nebraska is so great is because they are balanced. You can't play the run against them. We're trying to accomplish the same thing out of a wishbone approach.

We have begun to come around to our triple option game, which is the basis of our offense. We moved back a little bit to where we were last year, hoping to end up where we were in the Boston College game, with more experience under our belts. We are going to take a step back to basics and try to work ourselves back to a team that has a deep passing threat and one that has the ability to be an outstanding passing team.

We realize that to be the best that we can be—our goal—we need to be a team that is equally as good at the pass as it is at the run. We want to be a team that can call the pass 25 times a game and be effective at it and at the same time get the ball to Bo and Lionel 15 times each.

What Ever Happened to Forrest Blue?

by Jon Johnson
Student Assistant
AU Sports Information

Forrest Blue has dealt in real estate much of his life. He has paid for most of it in dollars and cents. But some of the land he acquired in the 1960s he bought with blood, sweat and tears.

The land he fought for—inch by inch, foot by foot—was in Jordan-Hare Stadium, where Blue proved himself to be one of Auburn's best centers in the Ralph "Shug" Jordan Era.

He was as successful then in providing real estate for running backs—clients of a sort—as he is now as a land developer in Rocklin, Calif.

Blue, originally from Tampa, Fla., played at Auburn from 1964-67. As a senior, he was named to several All-America teams and was the 13th player chosen in the professional draft. He signed with San Francisco, where he spent the first six seasons of his pro football career. He also played five years with the Baltimore Colts before retiring in 1979.

For Blue, playing pro football was "everything I always dreamed it would be."

"Playing in the NFL is a dream of all athletes that play football," he said. "I considered it an honor just to be there. You have to believe you are very lucky to even have the opportunity to play professionally.

"It's a glamorous life. For me it was a real great life—a real challenge competing against the best. There is nothing else like it. That's the hardest thing about getting out of football. I bet if football players didn't have to worry about their health, they would play all their lives."

At Auburn, Blue played on teams that had records of 5-5-1, 4-6 and 6-4. Although it may not have been the glory years of Auburn football, Blue has many fond memories of the university and its people.

"When I first visited Auburn while being recruited, I fell in love with the campus," Blue said. "The people were so friendly. I talked to a lot of people in pro ball who would tell me about their universities and I realized there is no place quite like Auburn.

"Unless you really experience it, you don't know how special Auburn really is. If I had it to do all over again, I would definitely choose Auburn."

Blue rarely has a chance to return to his Alma Mater. In fact, he has not attended an Auburn game since he graduated. It is this time of year he misses Auburn the most.

"The fall is a special time at Auburn," he said. "I remember going to Chewacla Park with the leaves turning and how nice it was just to walk around. That type of pleasant atmosphere which surrounds the campus, along with the friendliness of the people is what Auburn is all about. It all goes together."

He also remembers his head coach—Ralph Jordan.

"He is probably the fairest and most compassionate person I ever met. He treated everyone equally. You knew you would get a fair shake. He was a gentleman."

Blue graduated from Auburn with a Bachelor of Science degree in pre-law. He remembers his graduation day well, not because of being handed a diploma but because he was married the same day to an Auburn cheerleader. He and his wife, Anne, now have two daughters, Brandi, 12, and Britney, 11.

Blue says he keeps up with Auburn athletics as much as possible and is enthused about this year's team.

"I'm really excited that people are getting to know where Auburn is again," he said of the recent national exposure.

"I'm proud that I went there and I want them to do well."

Blue is hoping to visit Auburn in the near future, perhaps this fall. And this time, he won't have to swing any land deals.

RESEARCH

... paves the way

Developing a commercial chlorinating agent in chemistry

Testing brain and eye functions in the School of Veterinary Medicine

Accelerator control panel in the Nuclear Science Center

Studying protozoan parasites in animals to benefit human health areas

What do South Central Bell, Kodak, the John F. Kennedy Space Center, Texaco and Delta Airlines have in common with Auburn University? Executives from each of these—plus 25 other companies and professions—are lending their expertise and experience to the university's research program.

The Auburn University Research Advisory Council, formed in 1981, is the newest of several support groups that provide leadership to the university's efforts, helping to steer a steady course in developing the types of programs which will best benefit the people of Alabama and the region as well.

These 30 leaders, all from high-tech and research-oriented fields, share a common dedication to Auburn. Most are Auburn graduates. They hold degrees in areas from pre-medicine to English. But even those who did not study at Auburn obviously have a deep love for the school. That's evident by the amount of time and energy each person spends on the various council projects and activities — on their own time, as volunteers.

Coming from different backgrounds, from all across the country, this group is very diverse — a definite plus when seeking out new ideas that will move Auburn's research forward.

Auburn's vice president for research, Paul Parks, sees the council as a sounding-board for testing new ideas and research programs. "They offer advice and support that we couldn't get anywhere else, and because of the different fields they all represent, we are getting a true picture of the future needs in research," he says.

The council's first major project was to introduce state leaders to some of the exciting and important research which is already under way on the Auburn campus. Officials were invited to a two-day legislative conference on research, to see firsthand some of Auburn's major research efforts. It was an opportunity for them to learn about such widely ranging studies as reconstructive surgery for animals, nuclear fusion, the development of anti-convulsant drugs and improved methods of food production.

Council chairman Walter Grimes, vice president for Mobay Chemical Corporation in Kansas City, says he's never served on such an enjoyable committee.

"The spirit in which the members participate in the programs is wonderful. There's really a tremendous amount of work going on behind the scenes here, and this is our opportunity to give back to Auburn what Auburn gave to us when we were in school," he says.

TIGER PROFILE

Bobby Wallace, Assistant Coach, Defensive Backfield

If you could go anywhere in the world right now, where would you go?

"I would probably like to go on a cruise. I have always enjoyed boats and the water. It's just such a peaceful feeling on a boat with nothing around you but the ocean. It's the best way to experience getting away from the problems and pressures of everyday life."

What one or two qualities do you consider most important in a person?

"The number one quality in a person is loyalty. A player has to be loyal to his coach. The assistant coaches have to be loyal to the head coach and the head coach has to be loyal to the university. I believe that loyalty is something that is very important. Another quality to consider is honesty, which is a lot like loyalty. Once you find those two qualities in a person, you know that you can depend upon him and that he will be successful."

What do you think about having heroes? Is it a good thing?

"Heroes are definitely a good thing. Examples in people are the only thing that give you something to shoot for. Not everybody can be a Herschel Walker, but all kids can dream of being a Herschel. That's good. The big downfall is the pressure that can be put on a kid to succeed. It's not healthy for a kid to be expected to be great or to win. He's got to do his best and enjoy what he's doing. If he does that and gets a lot of family support, then he's in the most healthy situation he can be in."

What have you learned the most from your involvement in sports?

"I've had some good things happen to me in sports and some bad. But nothing is everlasting in sports, you can be a success today and fail tomorrow. Or if you fail today you can be successful tomorrow. You just have to work to be successful in the end. You have to be hopeful when you fail and humble in success."

If you began tomorrow without football, where would you direct your energies?

"It's not a situation now where I couldn't live without football. Without football I would try to find a position that would deal directly with people, and also one that would allow me more time with my family. You make a lot of sacrifices, big sacrifices, in football, but there is no job I love more and no job in which I would make the sacrifices I do now. I don't need to be rich to be happy."

What is your ambition or goal in life outside of football?

"The most important thing is to take care of my family. I want to give them the best life they can have. I want to be happy as a family and as a person. You have to enjoy your life now, because you only have one chance at it."

Describe the best time in your life.

"The best time in my life was when we were up in North Carolina. I was coaching at East Carolina at the time and we were successful. What made it the best time in my life was that I met my wife there. We started dating then and that was the best thing that ever happened to me."

What is your favorite book?

"The Godfather. It's not the most educational book, but it's the one I enjoyed reading the

*Tiger Profile Interview
by Joseph Hunt,
Graduate Assistant
AU Sports Information*

most. I enjoyed it because of the excitement and the fact that it was about a world that I imagine exists, but that I have no knowledge about whatsoever."

Favorite Entertainer?

"I'm not one for concerts or shows, but I enjoy listening to some soft music. George Benson is one I enjoy."

What are your best coaching experiences?

"My most successful coaching experience was during our first year here. On the signing date we got Bo Jackson, Jeff Parks, Alex Dudchock and a few others. It was great because we knew then what great players they would be for us in the future. My most rewarding experience would have to be the chances I have had to get to know the players here at Auburn. I mean people like Tim Drinkard, Bob Harris, Mark Dorminy, Dennis Collier and the people we have now. It's rewarding just to be around these people. They make coaching worthwhile."

1936-37 Tiger Gridders Pathfinders

Editor's Note: Elmer Salter, who wrote the following article exclusively for Auburn Football Illustrated, was Auburn's first full-time Sports Information Director. His SID career spanned 1929-1946. In 1946, he began a successful business venture as owner of WAUD Radio in Auburn. Salter retired in 1977 and still lives here.

In the article, Salter reminisces about the Tiger football teams of 1936 and 1937—Auburn's first two bowl teams. It is written in the inimitable style Salter developed as a young writer during that period.

Several of the athletes Salter publicized are on campus today in conjunction with the reunions of the Class of 1938 and the 1936 and 1937 football teams.

Football bowl fever came close to invading the Loveliest Village of Auburn in 1932, but an epidemic of costly Spanish influenza caused its initial arrival to be cancelled until the banner seasons of 1936 and 1937.

In planning for the debut of New Orleans' Sugar Bowl over a half century ago, the Crescent City officials contacted Auburn's Athletic Director-Head Football Coach Chet Wynne about bringing his undefeated Tigers of 1932 back to America's Crescent City to launch the now famous Sugar Bowl. Contact was made with Coach Wynne shortly after his unbeaten eleven had lost a 20-0 halftime advantage to South Carolina and barely emerged with a 20-20 deadlock.

During the week of the battle with the Gamecocks, 20 Tigers were felled by the flu and were not in any physical condition to play a full sixty minutes against an outfit as formidable as Billy Laval's determined scrappers. In a disappointed mood to think about another game after the upset 20-20 deadlock, Wynne declined the offer to take his Orange and Blue Bengals to what would have been the first Sugar Bowl Classic.

Auburn's next grid machines to be recognized as stiff competition for any bowl foe were the 1936 and 1937 clubs and they were honored as the first Tiger gridders to appear in post-season football extravaganzas on foreign soil and also in America. With a fine mark of seven victories against such formidable foes as Tennessee, Detroit, Georgia, Georgia Tech and Florida, two defeats and a lone tie, Auburn's 1936 outfit received an invitation to clash with Villanova in Havana, Cuba.

* To avoid duplication and for the sake of brevity, names of several players have been pulled from the 1937 roster. These players were first-year players in 1936 and, therefore, not listed on the 1936 varsity roster.

For Future Auburn Bowl Teams

That became the Tigers' initial bowl participation. The bowl fever had arrived at the Plain and an invitation to meet Michigan State in the potentially promising Orange Bowl occurred a season after the 7-7 excursion against Villanova on foreign soil.

The 1936 and 1937 Tiger clubs deserve all of the many laurels they are receiving today as being Auburn's first bowl teams overseas and also in America. To Auburn followers, the trip to Havana should not have come as a surprise. The Tigers of '36 already had visited in Canada and Mexico, played Detroit in Detroit and Santa Clara in San Francisco. They tackled a card that listed only one showing at home.

In earning a bid to the Orange Bowl a year later, Coach Jack Meagher's Tigers never performed at home in turning in an impressive record of five triumphs against two losses and three ties. Auburn trimmed Michigan State, 6-0, in what was the opening, major step in the Orange Bowl earning a reputation of becoming one of the foremost post-season football classics in America.

Two great football machines like Auburn and Michigan State never had fought in the Orange Bowl until the Tigers whipped the Spartans on New Year's Day, 1938. All-American center Walter Gilbert captained the Bacardi or Rhumba Bowl engagement in Havana and center Lester Antley in the Orange Bowl showing.

Defensive and offensive specialists were never mentioned in the thirties. The '36 and '37 Tigers were all-around aces and distinguished themselves regularly as four quarter mainstays. Their powerful exhibitions in winning fulltime playing medals provided Meagher's third and fourth class and colorful outfits at the Plain with deceptive, tricky fortification that earned all-star awards regularly.

Under Meagher in 1936 and 1937, Auburn produced all-star nominees at all eleven positions. They had to be point manufacturers and point stoppers, too. Auburn's Athletic Hall of Fame embraces some of the world's greatest players and several are listed as graduates of the Tigers' 1936 and 1937 moleskin ranks.

From their bowl playing days of one win and one tie, they established a pattern for their alma mater to follow and they can stand up with considerable pride in the important parts they have played in the Tigers' all-time bowl record of seven wins, seven losses and a lone stalemate. This fine bowl record was compiled against such teams as Villanova, Michigan State, Texas Tech, Baylor, Vanderbilt, Nebraska, Mississippi, Arizona, Houston, Oklahoma, Colorado, Missouri, Texas and Boston College.

It is not a surprise that Auburn University and its thousands of followers salute today's game honorees, the 1936 and 1937 Tigers—pathfinders for future Auburn teams in top after-season, sterling encounters. They are fine representatives of the true Auburn Spirit and you can count on them to be as eager to bask in Auburn's present football glory as they were in participating in their own almost a half century back, and in placing Milestone 200 in their university's victory parade.

WHOSE SIMPLE APPROACH TO BANKING WILL MAKE IT EASIER ON YOU?

Keep it

The last thing you need from your banker is a lot of double-talk; sales pitches in which simple options sound more like complicated choices. You need straight talk plain and simple. Uncomplicated explanations of banking services and their benefits to you. So here's our challenge. "Keep it simple at Central Bank." We're taking it to heart. We hope you will, too. Because banking doesn't make sense any other way.

A New Era

DYE

The fifth golden era in Auburn football, the Pat Dye era, began with promise in 1981 as the Tigers showed a return to the type of football played during the glory years. Dye's first team battled an extremely difficult schedule and set the foundation as a hard-hitting, scrappy club that Auburn fans will rally behind each week.

Auburn's return to glory in football continued in 1982, as Dye led the Tigers to a 9-3 record and their first appearance in a post-season bowl in eight years. Auburn defeated Boston College, 33-26, in the Tangerine Bowl (now the Florida Citrus Bowl) in Orlando, Fla.

Auburn's No. 14 ranking by Associated Press and United Press International in 1982 and its high pre-season rankings this fall are signs that the Tigers have maintained course toward becoming one of the nation's elite teams in collegiate football.

Pat Dye is the 22nd in a long line of successful and sometimes amusing Auburn football coaches.

George Petrie, a history professor, was Auburn's first coach. He and Dr. Charles Herty, a professor at Georgia, brought football to the Deep South when they arranged for their respective schools to play in Atlanta's Piedmont Park in February of 1892. Auburn won 10-0 and college football has been a part of Southern life and culture ever since.

Ralph "Shug" Jordan was Auburn head football coach for 25 years. He holds the record for longevity and the most wins — 176 victories in 25 years, an average of more than seven victories a year.

D.M. Balliet holds the record for brevity. He coached for one game and, as far as can be determined, there is no record of the game in which he coached. Research indicates it was probably the 0-0 tie with Georgia Tech in 1893, but no one can be certain. That is the only game of that season in which his predecessor's name, G. H. Harvey, is not mentioned. There is no indication of why Harvey did not coach the last game. Going into it, his team had a 3-0-1 record with two wins over Alabama and one win over then powerful Vanderbilt.

There have been four golden eras of Auburn football, beginning with John Heisman in 1895 and followed by the Mike Donahue era, the Jack Meagher era and the greatest of all, the Shug Jordan era.

Generations Fund:

From Krugerrands To Computers

The most unusual gift? Perhaps it was the South African Krugerrand that was given by a faculty member. Or maybe the 28 acres of land valued at $200,000 in Wilcox County, most of it within the Liddell Archaeological Site listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The land was donated by two faculty members and their sister—Will Liddell Jr., associate professor of pre-engineering at AUM and his wife Mary; Laura Ann Liddell Hall and husband Norman; and Oxford Stroud of the English faculty with his wife Mary Anne. All three members of the family, Auburn graduates.

The biggest gift in terms of dollars? George L. "Buck" Bradberry, director of Auburn University's development program, points with pride to several: Montgomery's Vesta Lou Walker Overton, $1 million; Birmingham industrialists James W. Goodwin and John Harbert, $2 million and $5 million, respectively; Andalusia forester Solon Dixon, land valued at $3.8 million.

Auburn's first chair fully supported by outside funds was the result of a gift valued at more than $1 million from Atlanta's George W. Peake, also a forester.

All these gifts have gone to the Auburn Generations Fund, which was announced in the fall of 1981 with a goal of more than $61.7 million. It now stands at the three quarter mark, with approximately $50 million committed.

There is a lot at stake. In addition to needed construction projects there are needs that cannot be expressed in terms of bricks and mortar—the "invisible" but tangible things like support for faculty development ... student scholarship ... research ... and library endowment.

"Although we are ahead of schedule, the most challenging part of the campaign is yet to come," Bradberry points out. "We are fully committed to making our goal within the time frame of December, 1984.

"We're confident," he continues. "But with nearly $12 million to raise we can't slow down."

Because of staff limitations, the number of donors that can be reached by personal contact through the campaign will always be less than the number willing to give, he adds.

The most unusual gift? Maybe it was the electrical engineering reference book donated through the Generations Fund by a medical technician in AU's Student Health Center, on behalf of her husband, a graduating senior.

She said she felt this "gift of love" would be a meaningful graduation gift and at the same time, benefit Auburn.

The Krugerrand? Funds from the sale of the gold piece, worth about $500, went to more books, for the collection at Ralph Brown Draughon Library.

We hope it becomes a trend—that's not unusual at all!

COMPUTERS COUNT AS GIFTS, TOO—Most of the gifts committed to the Auburn Generations Fund have been fulfilled by ink drying on a check—but the university has had its share of unusual gifts too. A $300,000 gift toward a computer-aided design system by the Huntsville-based Intergraph Corporation provides students with the tools of tomorrow. Shown here are electrical engineering professor Victor Nelson with students Robert Sharpe and Marie DeMaiores at work with the Intergraph 3D plotter, a system in which "blueprints" are generated and stored electronically. It's not the only "high tech" gift given through the Generations Fund ... or the most unusual ... but represents the growth potential available through the generosity of Auburn's friends and alumni.

The Auburn University Marching Band

Since its inception in 1897, the Auburn University Marching Band has been an integral part of the Auburn football scene. The band, which now has some 290 members, has thrilled halftime audiences at Auburn games for years.

Housed in Goodwin Hall, a rehearsal facility built by the donations of the J. W. Goodwin family of Birmingham, the band has played in numerous festivals and parades across the country. They played in the 1982 Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, FL as well as at each A-Day game and each home football and basketball game.

This season the band includes representatives from the states of Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Florida, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Louisiana, North Carolina, Ohio, New Jersey, Missouri, Wisconsin, Virginia, Tennessee and also from Puerto Rico.

The band is wearing uniforms that were purchased with funds donated by Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Jack Warner of Tuscaloosa.

Chevrolet's M.V.P.

We're proud of our newest Most Valuable Performer—the new Corvette. The sporting analysts of the automotive world, the enthusiast magazines, are pretty impressed with it, too. Car and Driver magazine called it, "The most advanced production car on the planet."

That makes us feel pretty good at Chevrolet. Because a lot of deep thinking and hard work went into creating the new Corvette.

The dedication that went into Corvette is the same dedication demonstrated by the athletes of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. And since we know what hard work is all about, we established the Chevrolet Scholarship Program back in 1971. This awards the Most Valuable Players in NCAA football and basketball games with a donation to their respective school's general scholarship fund.

To date, over 1,800 scholarships, totaling over 1.9 million dollars, have been donated to assist men and women in furthering their educations.

At Chevrolet, we strive for excellence. That's why we support the goals of the NCAA and that's why we offer cars like our Most Valuable Performer—the new Corvette.

MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Let's get it together... buckle up.

TIGER PROFILE

No. 42 Jeff Jackson, Senior Linebacker, Griffin, GA

If you could go anywhere in the world right now, where would you go?

"The Virgin Islands. There, sitting out there so far away from anything else, it has got to be peaceful."

What one or two qualities do you consider most important in a person?

"I look for people you can talk to. You have to be able to communicate with each other. If you can't communicate, you can't work together."

What is your favorite childhood memory?

"I remember when I first started playing football. My father took me and my two brothers out and we got some equipment for Pop Warner League football. I was real small then and one of my brothers hit me and knocked some teeth out. I started crying and didn't want to play any more. My brothers kept playing and I wanted to be just like them, so I kept playing."

What have you learned from football?

"I've learned that you can go from the bottom to the top. When I came to Auburn, we were on probation and hadn't been to a bowl game in years. I knew that sooner or later we would win. I have the experience of being on the bottom if that should ever happen again. But for now, being on top, I couldn't ask for anything better."

If you began tomorrow without football, where would you direct your energy?

"I would continue my education. I'm studying accounting and I'd like to get my degree and then pass the CPA exam."

Who was your hero when you were growing up?

"I had several heroes growing up. When I was playing league ball, I wore number 63, the same number as Ernie Holmes of Pittsburgh. He was a solid player, very aggressive. I liked that."

*Tiger Profile Interview
by Joseph Hunt
Graduate Assistant
AU Sports Information*

Describe your most vivid memory of having been punished as a child.

"I was punished a lot when I was young. I remember my mother told me not to leave the front of the house. I went up the street and some kids beat me up. I took that as my punishment, because I should have been home like my mother told me. Most of the time, when I was bad, I would be grounded, something like not being able to ride my bike for a week or so. I loved riding my bike and that punishment hurt."

How does Jeff Jackson like to spend an evening?

"I like a night out with my girlfriend. We'll go out to dinner, maybe a movie and some dancing. And then later we'll sit around and talk."

Banners high.

To thy name we'll sing thy praise,
From hearts that love so true,
And pledge to thee our Loyalty the ages through.

We hail thee, Auburn, and
we vow
To work for thy just fame,
And hold in memory as we do now
Thy cherished name.

Hear thy student voices
swelling.
Echoes strong and clear,
Adding laurels to thy fame
Enshrined so dear.

From thy hallowed halls
we'll part,
And bid thee sad adieu;
Thy sacred trust we'll bear with us
The ages through.

We hail thee, Auburn, and
we vow

TOUCH DOWN AT THE GOVERNORS HOUSE!

The Governors House is central Alabama's largest convention facility and Montgomery's most convenient meeting place. We offer alumni group rates and special sports packages. So come dine in the Rotunda Restaurant and toast the team in the Greenhouse Lounge.

It's a pleasure to welcome War Eagle fans!

WINNING SUPPORT

Donors of athletic scholarships play a significant part in the development of a successful athletic program. Auburn University is proud to recognize and honor the contributors whose names appear on these pages. They have provided athletic scholarships for 1983-84 through substantial contributions to the Auburn University Foundation.

---

28 scholarships were donated by friends of Auburn who wish to remain anonymous.

From One Great Team To Another...

A Winning Tradition

Bill Cody, a former Auburn all-american, knows what it takes to be a winner. The same things that make a great football team — spirit, dedication, determination and commitment — have helped make the team at Royal Olds the performance leader in this area. With a talented team of professionals and superior GM products, Royal Oldsmobile, like the Auburn War Eagles, has the ability to go all the way. Come see the winning team at Royal Oldsmobile - you'll understand why we're "the dealership that's different."

CIMARRON '84 THIS ONE'S GOT THE TOUCH.

The Cadillac touch. It's everywhere. You can feel it when you put Cadillac's road-hugging Touring Suspension to the test. You can see it ... inside and out. From leather-faced front buckets with lumbar support to a hand-buffed exterior finish. It's attention to detail, too. Like push-button air. And aluminum alloy wheels. You've got to drive this car ... and experience the Cadillac touch. Cimarron '84.

BEST OF ALL... IT'S A CADILLAC.

Let's Get It Together... Buckle Up.

Auburn's Future Looks Positive

Guest Column
 Reprinted From The Auburn Plainsman
 by Glenn Eskew

Auburn. A thousand memories come to mind. A feeling of warm friendship under the aura of university. A conglomeration of education and comfortable living in a relaxed atmosphere. A university with a future of endless prospects and exciting possibilities.

Sure Auburn's got problems. What major university doesn't these days? Auburn is being sued by the federal government, worried about its accreditations, censured by one group and condemned by another. But Auburn's biggest problem is growing pains.

The trustees have to decide what to do with Auburn. Should Auburn revert to the old A.P.I., or progress into the future as a major university equally comprised of its land grant tradition and its liberal arts heritage?

Auburn has lots to offer, one of the best and most inexpensive college educations in the South, high standards of traditions and morals, and a genuine desire to serve the student.

The future holds much for Auburn. Alumni are supporting the University more than ever before, student admissions continue to increase and the faculty, no matter what it has been through, is determined to make Auburn an excellent school academically. Auburn can do nothing but progress.

Soon, a new president will be chosen to lead Auburn into the future. A new era will begin displacing past grievances and problems. Already, the current administration is working to alleviate Auburn's racial discrepancies, solve staff inadequacies and increase faculty salaries.

Now, as never before, the Board of Trustees realizes its importance as the directional force behind Auburn University. Several trustees want to improve the relations between administration, faculty and students. Because of this, they are becoming more accessible to these three vital parts of the University by increasing their visibility on campus, communication with the faculty and participation within the administration.

The city of Auburn is experiencing marked economic growth. New apartment buildings continue to go up and new businesses open. The city thrives on the student and the commerce he generates.

The student also thrives on the city. Auburn is a beautiful town, hospitable, informal, relaxing. Life here is easy, with everything catered to the student.

Could it be the Southern charm, the inbred traditions handed down year after year and the instilled pride every student feels when he comes to Auburn that creates this enchanting town?

A walk through Samford Park on Sunday afternoon suggests Auburn's secret. Passing under the time-honored tower, listening to the chimes and seeing squirrels at play gives a hint of Auburn. Pausing under an ancient live oak and watching students go by adds light to Auburn's continuing heritage. But feeling the peacefulness of the afternoon, the soft wind rustling the azaleas and the overall quiet of the park explains Auburn's magical existence.

Auburn is a beautiful place. Perfect for growing up during those formative college years. A place where time stands still for one brief second and gives the student an opportunity to relax and enjoy life. This way of life which becomes a memory to alumni creates the Auburn atmosphere so known and loved.

TIGER PROFILE

No. 68 Bob Hix, Senior Offensive Lineman, Jefferson, GA

If you could go anywhere in the world right now, where would you go?

"I guess I would go over to Europe. When you are growing up you hear so much about it, how historic it all is. I'd like to see it for myself. Just a visit."

What one or two qualities do you consider the most important in a person?

"Honesty. If you're not honest, you can't be good at anything you try. You have to be honest with yourself and with others. You have to be honest to achieve your goals."

What is your favorite childhood memory?

"Just being with my family. We used to go on trips, camping trips. I enjoy being with my family."

What have you learned most from sports that will carry over into daily life?

"I've learned that hard work will pay off. I've been through two coaching eras at Auburn. I've been through red-shirting, scout squad work and a head coaching change. Through it all I've worked hard and I've learned that hard work makes you a winner."

If you began tomorrow without football, where would you direct your energy?

"I'd work on my studies. I'm working on two engineering degrees—mechanical engineering, and forestry engineering. Right now I'm working on football and school."

What is your ambition and goal in life after football?

"To be a success in whatever field I choose. Isn't that the American Way? To be the best in what you do, to be respected for what you are. I want to be happy in what I do."

Describe the best time in your life.

"I can't say that any one time was better than any other. When I'm home from school and can spend some time with my family. I also enjoy spending time with friends here in Auburn."

What do you think about heroes? Are they a good thing? Who are your heroes?

"Oh yes! I have had different heroes at different stages of my life. I remember when I was in elementary school and I looked up to the varsity players. They were so popular and in the spotlight."

Describe your most vivid memory of having been punished as a child.

"I was about eight or ten. Some friends of mine and I were throwing tomatoes at cars as they passed by. One car stopped and the police came. It went downhill from there. I guess you could say I got an old fashioned whipping."

Your favorite entertainer?

"My favorite entertainer is either John Wayne or Clint Eastwood. They project an all-male image, really macho and tough. I don't see that in me but I think it's pretty neat."

If you could only make two phone calls for the rest of your life, who would you call?

"I would call my parents and my family. They're very important to me. I wish I could say a special girl, but I can't. Not yet."

What is Bob Hix's favorite way to spend an evening?

"I like to be around people, friends. I don't like things particularly loud, but a nice quiet evening visiting friends is nice."

If you could travel anywhere in the world right now, where would you go?

"I'd have to say Hawaii. My brother was there and he told me how nice the people are. It's a different place and I've never been there before."

What one or two qualities do you consider most important in a person?

"Caring and thoughtfulness. I like a good sense of humor too. It's so much easier to get along with a person who cares and who has a good sense of humor."

What is your favorite childhood memory?

"Going to New York for the first time. I was about ten at that time. My parents are from the city and we moved from Florida to Baltimore. We would go to New York all the time. I remember the first time. It was so big and different. I was awestruck."

What have you learned from football that will carry over into your daily life?

"Dedication. You have to have it to play this sport. There are a lot of hard times, practice, winter work outs, spring practice. You have to be dedicated to get through it all. I've met a lot of different types of people through football and I think that will help me in the future."

If you began tomorrow without football, where would you direct your energy?

"I'd miss the heck out of it. I would finish school, get my degree in business and start from there. I'd probably settle down, get married and find a secure job that I will like. I'd still have some fun."

Describe the best time in your life.

"Definitely here at Auburn. I enjoy playing football. I've met a lot of people, young and old. There's a good atmosphere here, especially for me at this age."

Describe your most vivid memory of having been punished as a child.

"I got into a fight with my brother. We were watching 'Kung Fu' on television and that got us started. He punched me in the stomach and I poked him in the eye. I'll never forget the expression in my Dad's eyes when he saw us fighting. We each got a smack and we didn't get dessert that night."

Who are your favorite entertainers?

"On a Sunday afternoon, there's nothing funnier than a Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin movie. Those two are so funny together."

The Auburn Tigerettes

The Auburn Tigerettes are a group of some 60 girls who assist the Auburn football program in many ways. These girls have volunteered their time to aid in recruiting on Saturday afternoons and to help with the overall administration work. Whatever needs to be done to help the cause of Auburn football, the Tigerettes stand ready to do. Each week we will feature a different set of these girls who have become a valuable part of Auburn football.

Welcome to Jordan-Hare Stadium

The Auburn Athletic Department is eager to render the maximum service to the patrons of Jordan-Hare Stadium. This includes those in our ticket office, ushers, police, stadium guards, vendors and all other attendants on game days. We are grateful for the letters of appreciation received in recognition of the courtesies our staff tries to render and we are eager to receive your suggestions for improvements.

For maximum enjoyment of today's game and for your health and safety, please acquaint yourself with the information on this page. Some of it is interesting. Some of it may save your life.

FOR YOUR HEALTH AND SAFETY ...

TICKETS

Everyone, regardless of age, must have a ticket to enter the stadium. No pass out checks will be issued. The ticket-holder is restricted to the gate, section, row and seat indicated on his ticket.

All sales are final. Tickets cannot be refunded or replaced if lost, stolen or destroyed. The Auburn University Athletic Department reserves the right to revoke tickets by refund of purchase price.

The holder of tickets to Auburn University athletic events agrees to abide by stadium and university policies.

GATE PROCEDURES

All gates open one and one-half hours before kick-off. Ticket-holders should enter the gate indicated on their ticket. All food and drink containers including hard surfaced materials of any type may not be brought into Jordan-Hare Stadium.

Bottles, horns, cans, thermos bottles, ice bags, ice chests and any object related to the articles mentioned are prohibited. Gate personnel are instructed to enforce this rule in the interest of safety.

MEDICAL EMERGENCY

Should you need medical attention, notify the white-clad individual on the nearest concourse inside the stadium. Within three minutes, top flight medical aid, equivalent to hospital aid, will be at your side. DO NOT LEAVE YOUR SEAT. Contact the nearest white-clad medical staff member. Remain in your seat. That is the quickest way to receive medical aid.

DOCTORS

Doctors on call should leave the location of their seat at the WILL CALL window, which is located on the West side of the stadium. A number will be assigned and you will be paged by that number throughout the season.

CROWD NOISE

Excessive and uncontrolled crowd noise can result in a five yard penalty against your team. Please observe quarterback and officials' signals for quiet.

GAME PROGRAMS

The official game program, Auburn Football Illustrated, is on sale outside the stadium for $2.00. Depending on sales, the game program will be available most games through vendors circulating throughout the stadium just prior to and during the first half.

ARTIFICIAL NOISEMAKERS

Horns and artificial noisemakers are not permitted in Jordan-Hare Stadium, according to an SEC rule. Stadium personnel have been instructed to pick them up at the gates.

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES

State law prohibits the consumption of alcoholic beverages on the Auburn campus. Intoxicating beverages are prohibited at Jordan-Hare Stadium and on stadium grounds.

TELEPHONES

Public telephones are located beneath the North, South, East, West and Upper West Stands.

LOST AND FOUND

Report lost articles to the Auburn Campus Security Office on Monday following the game. All articles found in the stadium should be turned in to the first aid room.

RESTROOMS

Restrooms for men and women are located on the concourse level beneath the North, South, East, West and Upper West Stands.

PARKING

Convenient parking is available near Jordan-Hare Stadium. Follow the directions of the policemen and game parkers who will direct you to and from the nearest parking areas in the minimum amount of time parking and departing.

Jordan-Hare Stadium

Jordan-Hare Stadium, one of the top football facilities in the country, represents a tribute to Auburn football's past and a vote of confidence in its future.

Named for Ralph "Shug" Jordan, Auburn's all-time winningest football coach, and Cliff Hare, a member of Auburn's first football team, the stadium was enlarged in 1980 to seat approximately 72,000 fans.

The upper deck on the West side, seating 10,700, was built at a cost of $7.4 million and took almost two years to complete.

It is the fifth major expansion of the stadium in 30 years, evidence of the continuing growth of Auburn football.

The stadium was officially dedicated as Auburn Stadium in 1939 when Auburn and Florida played to a 7-7 tie. The first stadium had 7,500 seats. It consisted of what is now the bottom half of the West stands.

The stadium was renamed Cliff Hare Stadium in 1949 when 14,000 seats—the present East stand—were added to bring the capacity to 21,500.

Jordan became coach of the Tigers in 1951 and the stadium began its rapid growth. In 1955, another 14,000 seats were added bringing the capacity to 35,500. Jordan's 1957 team won the National Championship and by 1960 more seats were needed. The South end was enclosed and the capacity reached 44,500.

In the late 60's with the advent of Pat Sullivan, Terry Beasley and more great Jordan teams, still more seats were needed. The North stands were added in 1970 and Cliff Hare Stadium became a complete bowl seating 61,261.

It was renamed Jordan-Hare Stadium in 1973 in recognition of Jordan's lasting contributions to Auburn football. It was the first stadium in the country to be named for an active coach.

In 1978—almost right on schedule — the Board of Trustees approved the addition of the upper deck. Jordan, by then a member of the Board of Trustees, said the decision to enlarge the stadium was a "vote of confidence in the future of Auburn football."

Overall, Auburn has played 162 games in Jordan-Hare Stadium, winning 125, losing 32 and tying five. The Tigers won 30 straight home games between 1952 and 1960.

Georgia has been Auburn's most popular home opponent. The old stadium attendance record — 64,761 — was set on Nov. 18, 1978 when Auburn and Georgia played to a 22-22 tie in one of the most exciting games ever played in Auburn.

The previous high was 64,748 set against Georgia in 1974 when Auburn won 17-14.

With the addition of the upper deck, new attendance marks were sure to come. The record is 75,942 set at the Auburn-Tennessee game in 1980. Later that year, 74,900 came to see Auburn and Georgia play again. The same number watched the 1982 Auburn-Georgia game. Earlier in 1982, 73,900 attended the Auburn-Nebraska game.

The Auburn Creed

I believe that this is a practical world and that I can count only on what I earn.

Therefore, I believe in work, hard work.

I believe in education, which gives me the knowledge to work wisely and trains my mind and my hands to work skillfully.

I believe in honesty and truthfulness, without which I cannot win the respect and confidence of my fellow men.

I believe in a sound mind, in a sound body and a spirit that is not afraid, and in clean sports that develop these qualities.

I believe in obedience to law because it protects the rights of all.

I believe in the human touch, which cultivates sympathy with my fellow men and mutual happiness and brings happiness for all.

I believe in my Country, because it is a land of freedom and because it is my own home, and that I can best serve that country by "doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with my God."

And because Auburn men and women believe in these things, I believe in Auburn and love it.

As All Grows and Changes . . .

New Leaders Provide Added Vision

Auburn University's two new trustees - Robert E. Lowder of Montgomery and James T. Tatum, Jr. of Huntsville - share strong interests in their alma mater, and they are aware that they will play a vital role in shaping the university's future.

What are their views about Auburn?

Lowder says his commitment is to the improvement of Alabama higher education as a key to statewide economic growth. His first concern, he indicates, is the cause of higher education at Auburn, aspiring to insure that students are exposed to the ideals of the Auburn Creed. "Then, through their efforts, the state and nation will benefit."

To meet the shortage of state money available to higher education, Lowder says "Auburn must be competitive, in terms both of faculty salaries and of keeping our tuition within reach of most students ... the heart, I believe, of the land-grant university concept .... Therefore, we must identify all potential sources of funding ... and we must demonstrate that we are accountable for the wisest possible expenditures of these funds. Finally, we must insure to all funding sources that the Auburn story, and it is a great story, is told, and ... I think I know a little about selling. This will be a particular interest of mine."

Lowder says that even as Auburn has grown and changed, "There is still the great Auburn Spirit in evidence. I would hope that no matter how big we get, we can keep that very special spirit alive, and I believe that we can."

James Tatum says he will work to continue Auburn's strong land-grant tradition and to maintain excellence in all areas of the University. He believes this can be accomplished by "maintaining our outstanding faculty, by increasing the endowed professorships and by continuing alumni participation in the alumni councils. I will work to foster the spirit of cooperation between the trustees, administration, faculty, students, alumni and friends."

Aware of the short supply of state dollars available for educational support, Tatum said, "I am grateful to Gov. Wallace and the Legislature for their support, but we must be prepared to support Auburn with our own financial resources. I am grateful for the gifts to the Auburn Generations Fund. Auburn is already deriving the benefits."

Tatum adds, "We must continue to utilize the funds and resources available in an efficient manner; we must be proud that Auburn is recognized nationally for giving quality education at moderate cost, even though tuition may increase periodically if inflation continues. However, we must remain in cost reach of Alabama's citizens."

Despite the many campus changes since he was a student, Tatum says one thing remains constant, the Auburn Spirit.

Veteran trustee R. C. "Red" Bamberg, a member of the Board since 1956, was re-appointed by Gov. George C. Wallace and at press time has yet to be confirmed by the Alabama Senate.

Bamberg has said that he is encouraged by the impact of the building program's elimination of some of the overcrowding in the engineering program.

"I think," he added, "the Generations Fund drive is fine ... in that it enables alumni and friends to provide gifts for development of the University. A big plus is the presence of Pat Dye as head football coach and athletic director. He has unified our alumni. He is dynamic and positive."

The other members of the board of Trustees are Gov. Wallace, State Supt. of Education Wayne Teague, John W. Pace III of Mobile, Henry B. Steagall II of Ozark, John V. Denson of Opelika, Frank P. Samford, Jr., of Birmingham, Congressman Bill Nichols of Sylacauga, Michael B. McCartney of Gadsden, Morris W. Savage of Jasper and two student body representatives.

WAR EAGLE!

WAR EAGLE V

According to legend, football and the cry of "War Eagle" came to Auburn the same day.

It was February 20, 1892, the day Auburn and Georgia met in the first game of the longest continuous football rivalry in the deep South.

The story actually began before that. That first Auburn-Georgia game was only the culmination. The story actually began in 1864 at the Battle of the Wilderness in far off Virginia.

An Auburn student had gone off to fight with Robert E. Lee and his gallant lads in Gray. He was with them on the worst day of the long and fierce battle.

He was wounded and when the armies retreated to their respective lines, he was left on the battlefield — left for dead. When he regained consciousness, there were only two living things as far as he could see, himself and a baby eagle.

Brought together by their common bond of misery, the soldier took the wounded bird with him and nursed him back to health. When he returned to Auburn after the war, the eagle came with him.

The student-turned-soldier came back to Auburn and ultimately became a member of the faculty. He was there that day in Atlanta's Piedmont Park when Auburn and Georgia met in what would now be called "The Game of the Century." As usual, the eagle — called War Eagle because of the circumstances under which he was found — was there with him.

When Auburn scored the first touchdown the old eagle broke free from its master and began to soar above the field. Auburn people looked skyward, saw the familiar figure, and shouted "War Eagle."

At the end of the game which Auburn won 10-0, the old eagle collapsed and died, having given his all in pursuit of victory for Auburn. War Eagle may have died that day, but he lives forever in the hearts of Auburn people who love to stand and shout "War-r-r-r-r Eagle" long into the night following an Auburn victory.

The facts of this legend cannot be authenticated, but it makes a good story and is generally the one most used to describe how the "War Eagle" battle cry became synonymous with Auburn teams.

Auburn teams are known as "The Auburn Tigers" and "The Auburn Plainsmen," but the cry of Auburn faithful is ever the same: "War-r-r-r Eagle!"

The War Eagle at Auburn games is War Eagle V, a three year old Golden Eagle. It weighs 10 pounds, has a wing span of six feet and a life expectancy of 50 to 60 years. Ironically, it came to Auburn from Wyoming, just a few weeks after Pat Dye made the same move.

Animals Are Plastic Surgery Candidates

Americans spend millions of dollars each year on plastic surgery — to make noses smaller, to reshape ears and to reconstruct their bodies following accidents.

Through research being done by three Auburn veterinarians, pet owners can have the same type of reconstructive surgery done on their dog, cat, or even an alligator!

"Reconstructive surgery, one of the many specialty areas in our School of Veterinary Medicine, is a relatively new area of research," says Dr. Steve Swaim, alumni professor and Scott-Ritchey researcher. "One of the strangest cases we've encountered was an alligator that had been hurt in a nearby zoo. We needed to surgically repair a hole under his chin. The trainer offered to keep the reptile still while we operated by rubbing his stomach, but I insisted on giving it a local anesthetic."

Eric Pope, a resident in veterinary surgery, and intern William Miller also perform functional plastic surgery. Although some of their patients are born with birth defects like cleft palates or hare-lips, most of the animals suffer from a type of trauma, such as being hit by cars. Or they may have burns, gunshot wounds or bites from other animals.

"Our hope is that the students we are teaching now will recognize that these types of problems are treatable," says Miller. "Before reconstructive surgery was practiced, animals usually didn't have much hope of becoming functional again. Today bad injuries can be patched up. We just hope owners won't give up too soon."

The veterinarians agree that the hardest part of this type of surgery is the after-care of the wounds.

Dr. Steve Swaim with one of his patients in reconstructive surgery.

"Animals don't go through the mental trauma that humans do, but it's very hard to get a dog or cat to understand that they shouldn't lick or scratch a healing wound," says Miller, who specializes in the surgery of the eyes and the surrounding area.

Because this area of surgery is so new, researchers are concentrating on developing techniques and instruments from those used in human medicine which can be applicable to veterinary medicine.

Pope, also an Auburn graduate, has invented the "Pope-sickle," an instrument used to perform skin grafts on dogs and cats.

"The technique we are using is modified from human medicine and allows for better drainage," Pope explains. "I just recently used the 'Pope-sickle' on an Irish Wolf Hound. She had a non-healing ulcer on her elbow and I grafted skin from her side to help repair her wound. Animals often have 'extra' skin, so this procedure is done rather easily."

The benefits from the pioneering efforts of the Auburn researchers cannot be estimated in terms of restoring health to valuable breeding animals or in returning companion animals to their owners.

Florida State University

Tucked in the Florida panhandle just shy of the state's northern border lies Florida State University. At home in the capital city of Tallahassee, Florida State is a co-educational university and is the senior member of the nine universities in the state system.

A beautiful campus of some 345 acres is wrapped in greenery that combines the blossoms of camellias, azaleas and dogwoods with palm trees and moss-hung oaks. Over 150 buildings—from old gothic structures to the newer contemporary designs—dot the rolling campus, housing some 22,000 students, and nearly 4,000 faculty and staff.

Academic excellence is found in 14 colleges and schools offering courses of study in 18 major disciplines. There are over 90 choices of bachelor's degrees, 95 choices of master's degrees and doctorate degrees offered in 66 areas.

Students at FSU listen and learn from a distinguished faculty that includes six National Academy of Science members and a Nobel Prize winner. Although native Floridians make up the largest percentage of the student body, Florida State's students come from every state in the nation and another 115 foreign countries.

But it all began Jan. 1, 1857, in one building on 10 acres, when the governor of Florida, James E. Broome, signed a bill locating in Tallahassee the Seminary West of the Suwannee—the first of several names of the institution.

By 1860, the school, not yet a college, boasted an enrollment of 250 and in 1887, the president of the seminary organized the school into a four-year liberal arts college. At its first commencement in June 1891, degrees were conferred on two women and five men. Ten years later the institution was renamed Florida State College. In 1905, it became Florida Female College and in 1909 the name was changed to Florida

State College for Women. Dr. Edward Conradi was named president, a post he would hold until 1941.

In 1945, FSCW assumed a dual identity. GIs stationed nearby already were attending classes at the women's school, but as men they couldn't legally enroll. Therefore, FSCW took on the additional title, Tallahassee Branch of the University of Florida (TBUF).

In 1947 Gov. Millard Caldwell signed a bill making both the University of Florida and FSCW coeducational. FSCW became Florida State University.

As a university, Florida State has had six chief executives: Doak Campbell (1941-57), Robert M. Strozier (1957-60), Gordon W. Blackwell (1960-65), John Champion (1965-69), J. Stanley Marshall (1969-76) and Bernard F. Sliger, who has been president since 1976.

Since 1947, enrollment has nearly quadrupled. Today, its 14 schools and colleges offer students the opportunity to choose from more than 100 career options in arts and sciences, business, communication, criminology, education, home economics, law, library and information studies, music, nursing, social sciences, social work, theatre and visual arts. There also is a joint engineering program in cooperation with Florida A&M University.

Live Again The First 50 Years of The Sugar Bowl!

The heart-stopping moments . . . The great players of a half-a-century . . . Rise up in words. And in 250 historic photographs. In this book are the victories, the heartbreaking defeats, the pomp and the pain of this celebrated classic.

Author Marty Mulé, with the pen of a sports writer and the ear of a true historian, tells of the glory of players whose names cannot be swept away by time . . . Tulane's Monk Simons spinning 85 yards to defeat Temple in the first Sugar Bowl ever . . . Little Davey O'Brien passing and kicking TCU past Carnegie Tech . . . Frank Broyles returning to the Sugar Bowl as player, coach, athletic director, and TV commentator . . . Georgia's Charley Trippi and North Carolina's "Choo Choo" Justice competing against their own legendary reputations as future Hall of Famers . . . Bear Bryant of first Kentucky and then Alabama, all-time winner of the Sugar Bowl with eight victories . . . Bobby Layne, Hank Lauricella, Billy Cannon, Jake Gibbs, Glynn Griffing, Steve Sloan, Doug Moreau, Steve Spurrier, Ken Stabler, Archie Manning, Herschel Walker, and many, many others . . . all risen to greatness in the Sugar Bowl and in this official commemorative volume.

Like an "instant replay," Mulé's words bring back the golden moments in Sugar Bowl football you'll savor again and again!

Auburn's First Bowl Game A Revolutionary Affair

by Alf Van Hoose
The Birmingham News

The following story recalls some of the details of Auburn's first bowl trip. The Tigers traveled to Havana, Cuba, Jan. 1, 1937, to play Villanova in the Bacardi Bowl. It was written by Alf Van Hoose as a column in the Birmingham News in August, 1973, after the death of former Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista. Several players who participated in that game are on campus this weekend to attend the reunions of the 1936 and 1937 teams.

The early-week death of ex-Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista aroused a memory-chord in the sharp mind of general manager Elmer Salter of Auburn radio station WAUD.

Before Mr. Salter became a radio executive he was Auburn athletic publicist—though in mid-1930's the title wasn't official, only the work.

Thursday's mail deposited a copy of Salter's recollection of Auburn's first bowl game. Batista figured in the story.

The game would be Havana's Rhumba Bowl, Jan. 1, 1937—Auburn 7, Villanova 7—and Batista was prominent chiefly because of his absence, as Salter's letter hints.

"Auburn AD-coach Jack Meagher closed for the Havana game with a Cuban representative in Birmingham for a guarantee of $7,500. The rise of Batista from an Army corporal to dictator of Cuba occurred between the Birmingham meeting in November and New Year's Day," Salter wrote.

"Batista's power grab almost caused the game to be called off.

"The game was not approved by Cuba's new dictator, the program was printed early in New York and had a picture of the president Batista had overthrown, guarantee had not been paid, and it was doubtful if the new dictator was going to approve the expenditure ...

"After several conferences between Cuba's new and deposed leaders, a certified check for $7,500 was given the Auburn publicity director in Havana a few hours before the noon sailing date for the Tigers.

"Coach Meagher had issued an ultimatum that Auburn was not leaving for Havana without the guarantee check, even if Villanova already was at the scene.

"The Auburn publicity man was a very valuable man with the $7,500 check while waiting the arrival of the Tigers.

"Intersectional football failed to attract much attention in Havana and only 7,500 attended ... Auburn's experience in Havana was great and exciting but it is not believed that present athletic directors would book any more attractions for $7,500."

Several gentlemen in this column's audience today, hopefully Ralph Jordan, Bo Russell, Billy Hitchcock and Wilbur Hutsell, could have furnished expanded background to Salter's general introduction of an intriguing War Eagle football chapter, but Hutsell got the long-distance call.

In 1936 this grand pillar of Auburn athletics was Tiger trainer in the football season.

Hutsell begged for time to explore his Coliseum office and a scrapbook to refresh his memory of Havana, but it couldn't be allowed. He was home, and Friday browsing would not beat a deadline.

"My recollection is hazy about the guarantee Elmer talks about," Hutsell declared, "but I think Jack got it before he left Lee County. If I know Jack, he did.

"I do remember we got on the boat (S.S. Cuba) in Tampa and it took all night to reach Key West—and that most of the squad was very, very ill when we did.

"I remember we got to Havana on Sunday and played the next Friday. The atmosphere was tense, right after the revolution, but I don't remember it affecting our coming or going.

"Jack let the boys do sight-seeing — I remember we went one night to the big casino, though we didn't gamble.

"I remember the game, too. Billy

Hitchcock scored for us, early (on a 40-yard run) and Villanova blocked a quickkick late, and tied us.

"I also remember we left Havana that night. And I don't think Villanova got paid. I know we didn't get any more money, because there wasn't many people out to see the game."

Zipp Newman reports to The Birmingham News, still on file, offer further background, and also Clyde Bolton's new book, "War Eagle."

Newman failed to mention Batista showing up, if he did, though he wrote that ousted president Miguel Gomez did appear, and received "great applause."

"If ex-president Gomez had been a little later," Newman added, "he would have missed the longest run (Hitchcock's) of the game he was responsible for being played in Havana."

Newman enthusiastically wrote a day later that "the Rose Bowl and the Sugar Bowl may find the Cuban National Sports Festival a strong contender in years to come. Havana is dead set on throwing one football party a year."

Bolton quotes Bo Russell on "Batista coming in with all those police with guns. It wasn't an ideal situation to play football in. I was afraid one of those guns would go off."

So, whatever happened in Havana, Jan. 1, 1937, and immediately before and after, must have been grand. Testimony in conflict is not presented for ridicule, simply to show that all of those stories yet fascinate.

Class of '38 & '43

by Sam Hendrix

To make sure students yelled for their teams, Auburn's first women cheerleaders were introduced. Other women in the news were Jean Baily, who was selected A-Day Queen, and May Queen Sally Edwards. Leading the class were officers George Hall, president; Mary Haygood, vice president; secretary Randolph Panell; treasurer Andrew Curlee; and Wales W. Wallace, historian.

The class of '43 left Auburn in the middle of World War II. The clouds of battle hovered over their college days, but students at API in those days did their best to keep their minds on studying and college life. They had a Wreck Tech parade, an ODK cake race, wore rat caps and danced the "rumba-boogie" and the "jumping jive".

Their football heroes were men like Billy Barton, Fagan Canzoneri, Aubrey Clayton, Charlie Finney, Monk Gafford, Hawk Harkins, and J. H. McClurkin.

Welcome back to Auburn for your reunions, class members of '38 and '43.

Two classes are celebrating reunions on campus this weekend. The class of '38 is convening on the 45th anniversary of its graduation, and the class of '43 marks its 40th reunion.

Members of the class of '38, while watching the nationally ranked 1983 Tigers today, might recall some football success during their years at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The team went 21-6-5 between 1935-1937, and played in Auburn's first two bowl games—the Bacardi Bowl Jan. 1, 1937 in Havana, Cuba, and the Orange Bowl Jan. 1, 1938.

Class members recalling those days remember little about home games, though. There were only two games on campus during those years. Drake Field was inadequate, so the team played in such sites as Montgomery, New Orleans, Atlanta, Miami, Detroit, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Houston, and Jacksonville.

The 380 seniors among 2,420 API students in 1938 were equally proud of their basketball Tigers. Under Shug Jordan, API went 11-4 and finished third in the conference. Rex McKissick captained the team.

You can count on Sears for credit when you need it

Over 60 million Americans carry Sears credit cards—and thousands of new cards are issued every week. No annual fee. You can get your application in person at Sears or apply by telephone. Sears standards are tough but fair.

Since 1911 Sears has believed that responsible customers deserve credit when they need it, good times and bad.

Long before anybody ever heard of a bank card, millions of Americans were saying “charge it” at Sears. Among them today are college students, movie stars, tycoons, farmers, professors and millions of young married people like the couple in our picture.

Sears believes that credit should be used with care—that it is a tool for the prudent, not a license for spendthrifts. In a booklet called How to Choose and Use Retail Credit, Sears says:

- Use only as much credit as you can repay comfortably.
- Avoid credit buying just because it's easy to say “Charge it.” Be sure each credit purchase is something you really want or need immediately.
- Please don't get in over your head with credit—at Sears or anyplace else.

Sears does not hand out its credit cards automatically or loosely. Our standards are tough. But they are fair.

Sears sees no reason why prudent customers should have to go without something they need simply because they don't have the money in the bank at a particular moment.

With a Sears credit card you can charge what you need for your baby, for your home, for your car, for yourself. And whether you pay now or pay later at Sears, satisfaction guaranteed or your money back.

How to apply. You can pick up an application at any Sears store. Or apply directly by telephone: Call 1-800-323-3274, ask for the New Accounts Operator.

Send for free booklet. Whether or not you shop at Sears, the 20-page Sears booklet, How to Choose and Use Retail Credit, will help you to decide what kind of credit you need or if you need any at all. Write Ms. Terry J. Finlayson, Department 703, Sears, Roebuck and Co., Sears Tower, Chicago, Illinois 60684.

1983-84 Auburn Basketball Outlook

Three returning starters and one of the nation's outstanding recruiting classes combine to give Auburn an opportunity to be one of the best basketball teams in the Southeastern Conference this winter.

Basketball coach Sonny Smith guided Auburn to a 15-13 record last year, despite playing a schedule ranked No. 6 nationally in toughness in a conference one national publication picked as America's most competitive.

The schedule included nine teams that were in post-season tournaments and two—Georgia and Houston—that were in the NCAA's Final Four.

Smith is looking forward to the 1983-84 season. "I think our team will be improved in several areas, especially our power inside and our overall quickness," Smith said. "Rebounding will be another plus and I believe we'll be able to do more things offensively."

"One of the major things we will have to overcome is the loss of several players who were contributors last year. The players we lost were the largest and most effective senior group I've had at Auburn."

"Although we have three starters back, we'll be inexperienced," Smith added. "We're going to have to count a great deal on players from our recruiting class to replace some valuable seniors."

Starters returning are All-SEC center, junior Charles Barkley (6-6, 272), promising sophomore forward Chuck Person (6-8, 215) and veteran senior guard Paul Daniels (6-0, 170).

The eight players signed by Tiger coach Sonny Smith this year have been named as one of the top three recruiting groups in America in several polls. The influx of the signees will help offset the loss of Darrell Lockhart, a four year starter at forward, Odell Mosteller, a two year starter at guard, and other experienced seniors Alvin Mumphord, Byron Henson and Earl Hayes.

In addition to the three returning starters, other veterans back are senior forwards Greg Turner (6-7, 210) and Mark Cahill (6-7, 195). Other lettermen with less experience on the Tigers' 1984 roster are sophomore guards Donnie Butcher (6-2, 170) and Brian Shepperd (6-4, 195).

Barkley and Person lead the list of returning players.

After two outstanding seasons, Barkley has shown why he is one of the best players in collegiate basketball. Last year, he led Auburn in scoring (14.4), rebounding (9.5), field goal percentage (64.4) and blocked shots (45).

Barkley, from Leeds, Ala., was named All-SEC, All-District and Honorable Mention All-America last year. Ranked fourth nationally in field goal percentage, Barkley became the first player since Tennessee All-America Bernard King in the mid-1970s to lead the SEC in rebounding two years in a row.

Barkley was invited to the Pan Am Trials this summer and was one of 12 players selected for the U.S. team that won a bronze medal in the World University Games in Edmonton, Canada, in July.

Auburn All-America candidate
Charles Barkley

Person, from Brantley, Ala., started 20 of Auburn's 28 games in 1983 and had one of the SEC's best freshman performances. He averaged 9.3 points and 4.6 rebounds per game despite being bothered all year with a hernia, a problem corrected by surgery following the season.

A consensus choice for All-SEC Freshman teams his rookie year, Person was invited to the National Sports Festival in Colorado Springs, Colo., this summer but had to decline because of surgery for appendicitis.

Daniels, operating mainly as a ball-handler and feeder last season, ranked fifth in the SEC in assists with 134. Turner averaged 4.1 points and 2.8 rebounds per game in a sixth man role, while Cahill came off the bench and averaged 1.6 points and 1.0 rebounds per game.

Because six lettermen, including two starters, do not return this season, Auburn's signees are expected to have an immediate impact in 1984.

Six of the eight are freshmen—guard Frank Ford (6-4, 210) of Kissimmee, Fla., forward Terry Martin (6-6, 225) of Atlanta, Ga., center Michael Rutledge (6-10, 195) of Centreville, Ala., forward Howard Spencer (6-7, 195) of Goldsboro, N.C., guard Richie Welsh (6-4, 220) of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands and guard Gerald White (6-2, 175) of Augusta, Ga.

Two others, center Carey Holland (6-7, 220) and forward Vernia Strickland (6-5, 200), are upperclassmen. Holland, a junior from Baldwin, Fla., played for 1983 national JUCO champion San Jacinto (Tex.) two seasons. Strickland played one year at South Carolina, then transferred to Auburn where he went through a red-shirt season last winter.

Two walk-ons, junior forward Gary Godfrey (6-7, 220) and sophomore guard Robert Hollar (6-1, 160), also will challenge for playing time.

Asmuth Keeps Swimmers In Nation's Top 10

*by Keith Clines
Student Assistant
AU Sports Information*

When Auburn lost its head swim coach, Richard Quick, to Texas last year just before the season began, a search committee was formed to find a successor.

The committee sifted through the applications and kept coming back to one name. They decided the best man for the job was a man they already had—John Asmuth.

Asmuth, assistant coach under Quick, had been named interim coach during the search process and later was named head coach of both the men's and women's teams.

Asmuth did the job everyone thought he would do. He directed the men's squad to a third place finish in the SEC meet and a ninth place finish in the NCAA meet—the seventh time in the last 11 years the Tigers have been in the top 10 in the nationals.

The Auburn women's team matched the men with a third place finish in the conference meet and was a notch higher in eighth place in the NCAA meet.

This year, Asmuth believes both squads could improve their finish in the NCAA, but admits the move upward could be difficult.

The men's team could have the biggest challenge, according to Asmuth. "There are some very good teams ahead of us, and some behind us that are coming after us," he says. "I'm sure we're one of the teams that they think they can beat. It's going to be a tough year, but I really believe we should be able to stay in the top 10 in the nation. But it's going to take a great year."

Six All-Americans return to aid the Auburn men's cause, and as in years past the sprint freestyles look to be the Tigers' strong suit.

Senior John Black and sophomore Per Johansson both scored points for the team in last year's NAAs in the 50 freestyle. Johansson, from Borlange, Sweden, also finished fourth in the 100 freestyle at that meet.

Johansson, says Asmuth, could be considered the favorite to take the gold medal in the 100 meters in next summer's Olympics. He has won the European Championships the past two years, beating the top sprinters from East Germany and Russia. They, along with former Auburn great Rowdy Gaines, are considered the best in the world in the 100 at this time.

Asmuth looks for the individual medley to be another of the team's strong areas with All-Americans Chris Rowe and Black returning. Both swimmers competed in the

MINDPOWER

Higher Education is Alabama's greatest asset.
It provides our best chance for economic development.

It can generate jobs, reduce poverty, raise
the standard of living, improve the quality of our lives.

The future of our state is directly related to the progress and development of our public universities.

An Investment In Auburn's Future.

Lakewood Commons, a condominium, offers a unique opportunity for investors, alumni, and parents of students at Auburn University. This condominium concept provides cost efficient housing at affordable prices for students, and a sound investment for owners, with immediate tax shelter benefits for qualified investors. The Lakewood Commons condominium concept is one that has met with great success at universities in Chapel Hill, Athens, and Clemson.

Reservations at preconstruction pricing are now being taken. For more information write or call Lakewood Commons, 155 East University Drive, Auburn, Alabama 36830. Telephone (205) 826-7500.

Asmuth Keeps Swimmers

200 and 400 individual medleys at last year's NAAs.

Returning All-America Richard Hughey is one of the top backstrokers in the country according to Asmuth, but a lack of depth at the position concerns him.

All-America Andy Bauer is the defending SEC champion in the 200 breaststroke. He finished sixth in the NCAA meet in that event and fourth in the 100 breaststroke.

Team captain and All-America butterfly Steve Smith was the only loss from graduation last year and Asmuth is hoping for immediate help from incoming freshmen in the butterfly.

Skipper Wood, last year's SEC Diver of the Year and conference three-meter champion, returns to the platform for Auburn.

The top freshmen signees include long-distance freestyler Stephen Bauman, sprint freestylers Jay Beason and Janne Nilsson, and much needed butterflyers David Drier and Eric Roitsch.

Asmuth anticipates that Florida, defending NCAA champs, and fifth place finisher Alabama will vie for the SEC crown with Auburn and Tennessee fighting for third place.

"We're going to have to swim our absolute best to stay ahead of Tennessee," says Asmuth about the conference meet. "Tennessee had a very good recruiting year and they were just behind us last year. So we're going to have to really swim well just to hold on to third."

Asmuth is slightly more optimistic about the women's team moving up in the nationals, because he feels the Lady Tigers did not swim up to par in the meet last winter.

"Last year we had some freshman mistakes at the meet and we let some little things get us down," Asmuth says. "We learned from last year's experience and should be a much better team this year at the nationals."

With those mistakes hopefully out of the way and eight returning All-Americans Asmuth expects the women's team to improve its performance.

Three of those All-Americans, Sandy McIntyre, Dawn Hewitt and Darci Bodner, return to lead a strong contingent of backstrokers.

Senior captain Annie Lett is the top freestyler, finishing fourth in the 50 and seventh in the 100 in last year's NCAA meet.

The Tigers' top butterflyer will be All-America Carolyn Goodley and the breaststroke events will be led by All-America Jeanine Dale.

Asmuth looks for the individual medley to be helped by freshman signee Mary Beth Eckerlein. Freshman Libby Pruden will be given a long look in the distance freestyles, in hopes of replacing graduated captain Mary Holmes.

Other notable signees are divers Jenny Chapman and Joanne Pitt.

In the SEC, Asmuth expects last year's top two teams, Florida and Alabama, to challenge for the title. Auburn, Tennessee and Georgia should vie for the third place slot, in what he calls one of the two most dominant conferences in the nation.

TIGER PROFILE

No. 79 Donnie Humphrey, Senior Defensive Tackle, Huntsville, AL

If you could go anywhere in the world right now, where would you go?

"Jamaica. I've seen the commercials on television and it seems to be an interesting place, especially the women. They look attractive."

What one or two qualities do you consider the most important in a person?

"I look for someone I can trust. I like it when a person tries to be the best that he can be. That is something I feel in myself and I look for in others."

What is your favorite childhood memory?

"When I was nine years old, I was playing junior league football. I was a fullback then and in the state championship game, I scored four touchdowns. When I got to high school, they put me on the offensive and defensive lines. I didn't like that much, but for that one day, I felt like Jim Brown."

What have you learned from football?

"I've learned about discipline. I've also learned that you have to have a plan for all phases of your life and to always respect other people."

What is your goal in life after football?

"First I have to get my degree. I'm 46 hours shy of a degree in distributive education. Then I would like to start my own business, be my own boss. My ambition is to have other people working for me."

Describe the best time in your life.

"There have been so many good times and even some bad times. I guess the best would have to be witnessing the 23-22 win over Alabama last year and then going down to Orlando. Being injured, I didn't have to worry about practice, I just had a good time watching my teammates."

*Tiger Profile Interview
by Joseph Hunt
Graduate Assistant
AU Sports Information*

Describe your most vivid memory of having been punished as a child.

"When I was in elementary school, our teacher used to use a ruler on us when we were bad. We had to make a tight fist and she would hit our knuckles with the ruler. That was bad. Another time, I sneaked out of the house after dark. My mother found out and gave me a whipping."

How does Donnie Humphrey like to spend an evening?

"I like a quiet evening. Spending time alone, thinking out my problems."

It's not whether you win or lose, it's where you go after the game.

It's the final countdown and you're counting the seconds 'til you get to Quincy's. You're thinking: Delicious steaks, cut fresh daily. Steaming baked potatoes and thick steak fries. ## House

Let's not let this opportunity pass to wish a sincere "Happy Birthday" to Bill Beckwith who will turn more years than he cares to mention Wednesday.

Mr. B. is one of the truly great Auburn people. He takes more abuse during ticket time than all of us put together. It is his job to say "No" and there is no way he can avoid saying it. He has an impossible job and too few of us ever think to say "Thanks" for 33 years of loyal, dedicated service to Auburn. Too many of us think of ourselves rather than Auburn and Mr. B. is the man who gets caught in the middle.

Hell hath no wrath like a football fan who thinks himself scorned.

Mr. B. is one of the world's truly great ones and we are fortunate he is one of us.

Short-supply

If you want to see Auburn play at home anymore this year, you had best buy your tickets now. An ample but dwindling supply of tickets remains for the Mississippi State game Oct. 22 and the homecoming game with Maryland Nov. 5. Tickets to those games as well as the Oct. 15 Georgia Tech game in Atlanta will be on sale outside the stadium following today's game.

More than 240,000 people have seen

Auburn play in the first three games of this season, an average of better than 80,000 per game. At this rate we are sure to surpass last year's record of 687,408.

We've got another sellout, our fifth straight, next week in Lexington.

Until then ...
