North Carolina takes its final break of the season from the conference wars this afternoon as 9th-ranked (UPI) Florida State visits Kenan Stadium for a 1 p.m. kickoff. UNC comes in at 4-2 after two straight wins, while FSU is 5-1 coming off its most productive scoring night in school history.

Today is a day of opportunity for Carolina. After wins over Wake Forest and archrival N.C. State the past two Saturdays, the Tar Heels get a respite from league competition and at the same time they have the chance to post an upset that could turn a few heads nationally.

It could also be a day of atonement for the Heels. It was two years ago that these two teams met in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta and the result that day was a lopsided 28-3 Seminole triumph. The Tar Heels carry the memory of that embarrassing outing into today's conflict.

They also run straight into a multi-talented Florida State team that can beat you in many ways. Coach Bobby Bowden's cast started the season with four successive wins and one of those was at Nebraska—no small feat for any team. The past two weeks the Seminoles have found themselves on the opposite sides of a pair of routs. Two weeks ago, FSU lost at Auburn 59-27 in a game that was not as lopsided as the score might indicate. The Tigers racked up 28 points in the final seven minutes of that matchup. Then last week, the Seminoles blew away Tulsa by a score of 76-14, setting FSU records for most points, most touchdowns and largest margin of victory in a game. The odd thing about that contest was the fact that FSU racked up 76 points while gaining only 463 yards in total offense.

The Seminoles have a balanced running attack led by Tony Smith with a 6.4-yard average and 479 total yards. Also look for Cletis Jones and Victor Floyd to carry the ball a lot. They will run behind an outstanding offensive line led by all-star candidate guard Jamie Dukes.

The Seminoles also have a very good passing attack with outstanding receivers led by big play performer Hassan Jones, who averages 21.3 yards per catch. Phil Bryant has averaged 22.7 yards per reception and five of his 11 catches have gone for touchdowns.

Eric Thomas will be the FSU quarterback. The regular at that position, Danny McManus, is lost to the Seminoles for an indefinite period after being knocked unconscious in two games this year.

Florida State also features outstanding special teams with big-play returners and a record-setting placekicker in Derek Schmidt.

The Tar Heels have to enter today's contest in an upbeat mood. After an embarrassing loss to Georgia Tech three weeks ago, the Heels have rebounded with hard-fought wins over a pair of Big Four rivals.

Against Wake Forest here two weeks ago, Carolina put on an offensive clinic in the first half as Kevin Anthony threw for an ACC record-tying five touchdowns. Meanwhile, the Tar Heels' young defense played in a bend-but-not-break manner, repeatedly stopping Wake Forest deep in Carolina territory before yielding two meaningless touchdowns late in the game.

Then against N.C. State at Raleigh last Saturday, the Heels won in a different fashion. The opportunistic defense made the big plays, forcing two fumbles to stop scoring threats, intercepting three passes and making an impressive goal-line stand. It is obvious that this hungry unit is getting better each week. On offense, the Heels got the big plays from all-star wide receiver Earl Winfield, who made a circus catch for one touchdown and then made a nifty run for another TD on a double reverse.

The wins the past two weeks have now raised Coach Dick Crum's total at UNC to 59 in what is now the middle of his eighth year on the job. That moves him into a second-place tie for total wins by a UNC football coach. Carl Snively had 59 victories in his 10 seasons in Chapel Hill. The all-time leader at UNC is Bill Dooley, who won 69 games in 11 years.

The Carolina offense is led by Anthony, who has completed 58.5 percent of his throws this year for 1,318 yards and nine touchdowns. He was very steady against the Wolfpack last week, completing 15 of 25 passes including a beautiful 36-yarder to Winfield for a score and then running four yards for the clinching touchdown late in the game.

The Tar Heel running game has gotten a boost from the play the past two weeks of freshman tailback Derrick Fenner of Oxon Hill, Md. In two games, he has rushed for 259 yards and that is the second fastest start for a runner in Carolina history. Only the legendary Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice gained more yards in his first two varsity games with 265.

The Tar Heel receiving corps continues to give Coach Crum good play. That group is led by senior Earl Winfield, who has 34 catches for 506 yards and a 14.9-yard per catch average. He also leads Carolina in scoring with six touchdowns.

The offensive line is led by all-star candidates Harris Barton at tackle and C.A. Brooks at guard. Center Ralph Phifer played the best game of his UNC career last week at NCSU.

It is the defense, however, where Carolina has been especially improved the past two games. With three interceptions against State last week, UNC has now intercepted 10 for the year. That means the Heels have more interceptions in six games this year than they did in 11 games last season (eight).

Defensive guard Carlton Bailey and nose man Tim Goad were especially impressive in UNC's win last week. Also playing well were tackle Reuben Davis, who recovered a key fourth-quarter fumble, and linebacker Brett Rudolph, who made the hit on that third-and-one situation deep in UNC territory. Darryl Johnson made two big interceptions for UNC. And the other major play was put together by Derrick Donald, who stripped an NCSU receiver of the ball as he was going in for a score, and Larry Griffin who pounced on the fumble in the end zone.

Linebacker Carl Carr continues to lead the Tar Heel defense in total hits with 86, including a team-leading 46 solo tackles. He also leads the team in passes broken up with five.

Quarterback Kevin Anthony has led the Tar Heels to two straight wins, throwing for six touchdowns in the two games and running for one himself.

Next Home Game

Coach Danny Ford will bring his Clemson Tigers to Kenan Stadium November 9 for a 12:15 p.m. kickoff in an Atlantic Coast Conference matchup that will be televised regionally by the Jefferson Productions network. After getting off to a slow start, the Tigers have bounced back to win two in a row. The Tigers now stand at 3-3 overall and 2-1 in the ACC. Clemson is at home against N.C. State today and plays Wake Forest at home next Saturday before making its visit to Chapel Hill. The Tigers opened their season with a last-second 20-17 win at Virginia Tech before dropping three straight to Georgia, Georgia Tech and Kentucky. CU has beaten Virginia 27-24 and Duke 21-9 in the past two weeks. Overall, the Tigers have a 20-12-1 series lead against the Tar Heels. Clemson has won the past four matchups including last year's game in Death Valley, 20-12. The last UNC win in the series came in 1980 when the Heels swept to their last ACC championship. Clemson is 5-0-1 in its last six games in Kenan Stadium. The last UNC win over the Tigers here came in 1971. The two teams fought to a 13-13 tie in 1977. November 9 will be Rams Day in Kenan Stadium and another packed house is expected for a game that will go a long way in clearing up the 1985 ACC title picture.

Game Notes: This is only the second meeting ever between North Carolina and Florida State and as far as the Tar Heels are concerned they would like to atone for the first one. That came in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta on December 31, 1983 as the Seminoles ran to a 28-3 victory over the Tar Heels. Eric Thomas, the starting quarterback today for Florida State, made the first start of his career that day and passed for two touchdowns... Carolina returns this game in Tallahassee next season with the contest scheduled for September 20, 1986... In facing FSU coach Bobby Bowden, the Tar Heels are playing against their first Bowden of the season today. Bobby's son Tommy is an assistant coach at Duke, which Carolina will play here in Kenan Stadium November 23... Derek Schmidt, the FSU placekicker, has set a Seminole record with 66 consecutive points after touchdown. He will carry that record into today's game... Florida State is coming off a great outing against Tulsa in which the Seminoles rolled to a 76-14 win. They led 41-7 at the half of that game and scored 28 third-quarter points to put the contest away... The win was the most lopsided one in FSU history. The 10 touchdowns in the game were an FSU record and the 76 points were the most scored by Florida State since it joined the NCAA... The Seminoles got great special teams play in the win over Tulsa. They returned interceptions for 134 yards, punts for 86 yards and kickoffs for 81 yards... Keith Ross of the Seminoles ranks sixth in the nation in kickoff returns with an average of 26.7 yards per return. Schmidt is seventh in the nation in scoring with 57 points. The Seminoles also boast the 11th best scoring offense at 33.5 points a game and the sixth best defense against the pass, allowing only 123.8 yards a contest... In other events at Carolina this weekend, the UNC women's golf team is playing host to the Lady Tar Heel Golf Tournament at Finley Golf Course and the men's tennis team is hosting the Don Skakle Memorial Championships at the UNC Tennis Center. Both events run Friday through Sunday.

The View From The Press Box

By Rick Brewer, Sports Information Director

Earl Winfield is closing in on one of the oldest records in North Carolina football history.

However, he's most interested in acquiring something else he's very near to getting—a college degree.

Winfield, a 6-0, 183-pound senior from Petersburg, Va., has caught 34 passes in Carolina's first six games of the season. That gives him a career total of 94 receptions and leaves him just 13 catches away from setting a new Tar Heel all-time pass-catching record.

Art Weiner, the two-time All-America end of the late 1940's, still holds Carolina's career mark with 106 catches. But, Winfield is now in good position to challenge that long-standing record.

Winfield, a flanker, had another big day in Carolina's 21-14 victory at N.C. State last Saturday. He had four catches for 55 yards, including a sensational one-handed leaping grab in the end zone for the first Tar Heel touchdown.

Two weeks ago he had seven catches for 95 yards and three touchdowns in a 34-14 victory over Wake Forest. The three touchdown catches tied the school single-game record set by Charles Waddell in 1974 and equalled by Mark Smith in 1983.

Those performances are typical of the way Winfield has played all season. With Carolina putting greater emphasis on the passing game this fall, Winfield has been able to better display his remarkable pass-catching skills.

His 34 catches equals his previous career high set last year. Last week he caught a pass in his 17th consecutive game, tying Weiner's school record. He can own the record himself with just one reception against Florida State today.

But, none of those records are as important to Winfield as his degree.

"When I came to Carolina I know there were a lot of people who didn't think I would ever graduate," he says. "They thought I was just coming here to play football. And, in all honesty, that may have been the truth for a while.

"But, the atmosphere on a college campus is such that you get caught up in a routine of going to class and studying. In doing so, you realize there is more to life than just football."

Winfield says he almost made that realization too late. In his first year at Carolina, he separated a shoulder on the second day of pre-season practice. He missed the entire season.

"I was depressed that fall because for the first time in my life I wasn't playing some kind of sports," he says. "Even though I wasn't involved with football, I got behind in my studies. And once you get behind, it seems like you'll never catch up."

But, Winfield did. He is taking just two courses this semester to finish work on a degree in recreational administration. He gives credit to his mother and Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum for pushing him in the classroom.

"My dad died when I was young so my mom had to raise me and my two brothers," he says. "We've always been close and she has stayed on me about my schoolwork.

"Coach Crum has, too. His job may be coaching football, but he's concerned about what goes on in the lives of his players. He's been a big influence on me. He was one of the people who told me my first year here that I could graduate if I would just work at it.

"Personally, I had my doubts. I hadn't disciplined myself in high school and didn't have as good a background as I should have. Because of that, it's been tough. But, I think that's also made what I have accomplished even more satisfying."

While working as a student, Winfield was also developing into one of the premier wide receivers in college football.

"There is more to being a receiver than just catching the ball," he says. "You also have to be able to block, to run routes correctly and to run with the ball after you catch it. I try to concentrate on each of those in practice every day."

Winfield even practices one-handed catches, like the amazing one he made against State last week.

"You never know when you're going to be in a position where you can only make a catch with one hand, so I work on that in practice, too," he says.

That work has paid off for Winfield and the Tar Heels. His 94 catches has him tied with Charlie Carr for third place on the school's all-time pass-receiving list. Still ahead of him are Bob Lacey with 102 and Weiner with the record 106.

At his current pace, Winfield also has a chance to set a single-season receiving record at Carolina. Weiner set the record with 52 in 1949 and Carr equalled that total in 1966.

"Sure, I think about the records," says Winfield. "But, sometimes I have trouble believing I might be in the record book with people like Art Weiner, Charlie Carr, Kelvin Bryant and all the other great players Carolina has had. It just doesn't seem possible."

However, that possibility is very real, just like the degree Winfield will earn in December.

CHAPEL HILL

Stirny, Monk and the Iron Horse: The Legacy of UNC's Multi-Sport Athletes

By Scott Dupree
Sports Information Student Assistant

On a Friday night in the late 1930's, the place to be in Chapel Hill was the Tin Can, or maybe Woollen Gym, where students would gather for an all-campus dance.

As Kay Kyser's big band played, guys grabbed their favorite gals and did the jitterbug. Couples waltzed late into the night.

The dancing was fine indeed.

But even the snappiest pairs on the dance floor probably missed a step when George Stirnweiss walked in. Heads turned and the word spread quickly.

Everyone loved "Stirny." He was the most popular man in school.

"He was a real campus hero," recalls Orville Campbell, publisher of The Chapel Hill Newspaper, who was a student at Carolina during Stirnweiss' day. "You would be at a big dance, and when he walked in...man! Everyone wanted to see him."

It's no wonder why. Stirnweiss was a football and baseball star at UNC. He also played varsity basketball, and is certainly one of the greatest multi-sport athletes ever to wear Carolina Blue.

College athletes today seldom have the chance to play two or three sports. In this age of spring football, fall baseball and the like, year-round specialization is the norm. But up until about 1970, that was not the case. Athletes could play whatever game was in season—just like in high school. Carolina can point proudly to its share of two, three and, in some cases, even four-sport athletes.

A two-time All-Southern Conference quarterback, Stirnweiss directed Carolina's powerful teams from 1937-39. Stirny was a tough, gritty field general, who was known more for his running than for his passing. But against NYU in 1939, it was Stirnweiss' toss to halfback George Radman in the closing seconds that rallied the Heels to a thrilling 14-7 win.

On the baseball diamond, Stirnweiss sparkled at second base. In 1940, he muffed only two of 106 total chances and hit a whopping .391.

Stirnweiss manned second base for the New York Yankees from 1943 to '50, playing in three World Series and one All-Star Game. In 1945, he led the American League in seven offensive categories (including batting at .309) and in fielding percentage among second sackers.

At age 40, Stirnweiss was tragically killed in a train crash in New York.

Labeled as the "the next Choo Choo Justice" when he came to Chapel Hill, Danny Talbott lived up to the advertisements. A standout in both football and baseball, he was named the ACC Football Player-of-the-Year in 1965 and was a first team All-America while leading the baseball team to the 1966 College World Series. He was also named the McKeulin Award winner as the ACC's top athlete in the 1965-66 school year.

Perhaps Carolina's greatest three-sport star played here in the Roarin' Twenties. Monk McDonald won an amazing total of 12 letters in three sports. No other Tar Heel athlete has ever accomplished that.

Success followed McDonald like a shadow. He was an All-South Atlantic quarterback, an All-Southern Conference point guard and an all-state shortstop.

Each of his teams were big winners. The 1922 football squad finished 9-1, outscored its opponents 200-72 and lost only to powerful Yale. The 1924 basketball team went 26-0 and was named national champion. In 1921 and '22, the baseball team won 36 games and dropped but five. An ideal leadoff man, Monk hit .300 for his career and "ate up ground balls like peanuts," wrote the late Bob Quincy, a former UNC sports information director, upon McDonald's 1976 induction into the North Carolina Sports

Hall of Fame. Monk had major league talent, but opted for med school instead.

As a first-year med student, McDonald was asked to coach the 1925 basketball squad. He did, and the Tar Heels went 14-5.

McDonald, who passed away in 1977, was a spirited, peppery leader. He was also superstitious, asking that his dad be at football games, but that he not make his presence known.

Monk's mom didn't attend football games at all, preferring not to watch her small-framed son (Monk stood only 5-7) roughing around on the gridiron. When McDonald returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown against N.C. State in 1922, she was sitting in the lobby of the Carolina Inn, reading the Saturday Evening Post.

Ken Willard was as powerful as McDonald was crafty. A second-team All-America fullback of the early 1960's, Willard was a punishing ball carrier.

Willard, nicknamed "The Iron Horse," played baseball about how you'd expect a big fullback to play the sport. An All-ACC outfielder, he smacked home runs and racked up RBI's almost at will. Before coming to Chapel Hill, he turned down a six-figure contract offer, presented to him personally by Ted Williams, to play for the Boston Red Sox. Willard wanted an education. Tar Heel fans were thankful he did.

Willard belted what is probably the most talked-about home run ever hit at UNC. On a blustery April afternoon in 1964, the Tar Heels were playing Cornell at old Emerson Field, about where Davis Library now stands. A little lefthander was throwing for the Big Red, and he grooved a fastball that the "Iron Horse" launched into orbit.

"If that one homer could be chopped up into singles," Carolina Coach Walter Rabb suggested at the time, "Willard would be hitting .400 for the season."

"I stand in awe of that particular lick to this day," says Bob Lovingood, a physical education instructor at Carolina, who was an assistant baseball coach in 1964, and estimates that the ball flew 530 feet. "It didn't barely creep over the fence. I'm telling you. It went right through the top of a sycamore tree that was 50 feet tall."

After the ball finally landed, it bounced twice (as it crossed Raleigh Road) and hit the Tin Can, where Fetzer Gym is today.

Willard was never one to shy away from a little fun. After hitting three straight home runs in a game at Davidson, he struck out the next time up trying to drag bunt.

Why a drag bunt?

"I just wanted to have fun and cross everybody up," he says.

Rabb was none too thrilled. "Coach Rabb was so mad he couldn't see straight," Willard recalls. "He wanted to see me at least try to hit four."

About the time Willard graduated, another dynamic athlete emerged as the campus' resident celebrity.

Danny Talbott, always at his best under pressure, starred as a quarterback and first baseman. The year he put together in 1965-66 was simply remarkable. In football, Talbott was the ACC's Player-of-the-Year. In the spring, he batted .395 to earn All-America baseball honors and lead Carolina to the College World Series.

"I think he is, perhaps, the greatest clutch player I have ever known in college circles," wrote Jack Williams, a former Carolina sports information director, in 1967. "In a tough situation, I'd bet the house rent that he would get a hit or make a key fielding play."

Talbott, blond-haired and boyish-looking, quarterbacked teams from 1964-66 that pulled upsets of Michigan State, Ohio State and Michigan.

"Winning at Ohio State (14-3 in 1965) was a big thrill," says Talbott, who also played freshman basketball and is now an accomplished tennis player living in Rocky Mount. "(Ohio State coach) Woody Hayes had said before the game he couldn't understand why they were bothering to play a bunch of farm boys."

A three-sport superstar at Rocky Mount High School, Talbott had been heavily recruited and hailed by many as the "next Choo Choo Justice." In Danny's junior year, Choo Choo himself added a twist to those predictions. After watching Talbott shatter his 17-year-old single game total offense record and play brilliantly in a 47-35 loss to Georgia, Justice said, "If things keep up, they're going to be calling me the old Danny Talbott instead of referring to Danny as the new Charlie Justice."

One of Talbott's teammates, Charlie Carr, left his name engraved in both the football and baseball record books. Carr's 16 catches against Air Force in 1966 is a school best, while his sophomore batting average of .397 is the second highest in Carolina history. A rangy center fielder, Carr was a three-time All-ACC selection on the diamond.

John Gray Johnson, a 1916 graduate, and Albert Long, Jr., 1955, share a unique distinction in Carolina's athletic history. They are the only men to letter in four different sports—baseball, football, basketball and track—in the same year.

Despite the recent trend to concentrate on one sport, several athletes since 1970

The "Iron Horse", Ken Willard (40), was a punishing fullback for Carolina's football team in the early 1960's and he also hit the most legendary home run in Carolina baseball history.

have balanced their time and turned the two-sport trick.

Running back Mike Voight, UNC's second all-time leading rusher and two-time conference player-of-the-year (1975 and '76), ran his way to an ACC indoor track title in the 60-meter high hurdles as a freshman. Dee Hardison, an All-America defensive tackle in 1977, was also a heavyweight wrestler. In his first collegiate match, Hardison pinned his Clemson opponent in just 75 seconds.

Steve Streater, the shifty defensive back and punter, was an All-ACC selection at both positions in 1980. Streater also found time for baseball, pitching for two wins in 1979. Paul Miller, the 1971 all-conference quarterback, experimented with baseball as well, pitching a few games as a freshman and senior. It's remarkable that Miller was able to play anything at all. The lefthander battled back from spinal surgery and coped constantly with a chronic back problem in leading the Tar Heels to Peach and Gator bowl bids.

A pair of booming punters, 1975 graduate Dale Lydecker and '78 grad Johnny Elam, played spring sports exceptionally well. Lydecker was an All-ACC center fielder while Elam earned the same honor as a golfer.

Charles Waddell played three sports in the early 1970's. An All-America tight end, he sparked Carolina to bowl bids in 1972 and '74. Waddell, who stood 6-6, was also a key basketball reserve for two seasons. As a sophomore, he placed fourth in the shot put at the ACC Track and Field Championships.

Other multi-sport notables include Crowell Little, a quarterback and boxer from the late 1930's; Connie Gravitte, a running back, defensive back and All-ACC outfielder of the early 1950's; and Jesse Greenbaum, a 1940's star who lettered in lacrosse and soccer, in addition to being an All-America swimmer.

New York Yankees general manager Clyde King is famous for his days as a major league pitcher and as manager of the Yanks. But while at Carolina in the mid-1940's, King played on the basketball squad for two years.

Carolina's greatest tennis player, 1947 All-America Vic Seixas, went on to notch titles at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. Probably not many people realize that Seixas made the basketball team in 1942, but was soon called into the armed services.

Ray Farris, Sr., was the emotional sparkplug for the 1929 football team that went 9-1, outscoring its opponents by an average score of 35-6. An All-America guard, Farris also played at linebacker and punter. He captained the boxing team as a freshman and pitched as a junior. And he was also student body president.

George Netherwood, a writer for the Greensboro News in the 1920's, apparently appreciated the hard work of the never-say-die Farris. He wrote in 1929:

"Our idea of a real All-Southern team would be like this: Left end, young Farris down at Carolina; left tackle, that Farris guy at Chapel Hill; left guard, that Farris boy with the Tar Heels; center, that fellow Farris who played guard for the team that beat Virginia; right guard, Farris who plays with (Carolina coach) Chuck Collins' aggregation; right tackle, Ray Farris with the Big Blue."

Most people know of Paul Severin and Andy Bershak as a pair of All-America ends from the late 1930's. Both were tough, heady and durable on the gridiron. And both played basketball the same way. Severin, an All-Southern Conference hoopster, helped the Heels to the league crown in 1940.

Bershak, a strong rebounder, was perhaps the most loved and respected student ever to wear the school colors. He died of Bright's Disease, a kidney ailment, in November 1943, on the eve of the big Carolina-Duke game.

On a night when pep rallies and festivities would usually prevail all over campus, students could only mourn their terrible loss. Although he had graduated five years earlier, the 1944 Yackety Yack was dedicated to Andy Bershak.

The University

A magnificent campus has done much to earn the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill the title "Southern Part of Heaven," but the University's renown for natural beauty has been more than equalled by its reputation as one of the world's foremost academic institutions.

"UNC looks like a college campus with football-sized quads and tree-lined walks," says The New York Times Selective Guide to Colleges, which then praised the University for its academic excellence and gave it the highest possible rating for academics.

In a comprehensive evaluation published by the National Academy Press, Carolina was ranked as one of the foremost graduate and research institutions in the nation. The faculty was rated as the most outstanding in the Southeast and one of the best in the country.

The faculty outranked all others in the region in the humanities, mathematics, the physical sciences and the social and behavioral sciences.

Other studies have rated various schools and departments as among the best and the University Library was rated first in the Southeast and near the top nationally.

Such lofty standing also is reflected in the distinctions accorded faculty members and students. Members of the faculty have won major awards and held top positions in virtually every discipline in which UNC has a program. Fifty-four Guggenheim Fellowships have been awarded since 1951 and numerous Fulbrights and other coveted awards are received each year.

Nine Carolina students have been named Rhodes Scholars in the last 12 years and the University ranks third nationally among public institutions in the total production of Rhodes scholars. The Morehead Scholarship Program, patterned after the Rhodes and considered the foremost of its kind, brings about 60 outstanding, well-rounded freshmen to campus each year.

The Pulitzer Prize, one of the most visible of all recognitions of excellence, has been awarded to University faculty members, alumni and to books published by the UNC Press, long considered one of the country's best academic presses.

The faculty's research and scholarship capabilities attract large sums of money each year in research and training grants and contracts. Ranking among the top 30 research institutions in the nation, UNC received more than $74 million through 741 separate contracts and grants in 1983-84. The School of Medicine had an approval rate of more than 95 percent for its funding applications, the third best in the nation.

The University serves North Carolinians in many ways besides educating the youth of today and the leaders of tomorrow and conducting varied and valuable research. Through its many outreach programs, business and government leaders are given the opportunity to participate in management courses. Physicians, dentists, lawyers and other professionals are given the opportunity to take part in teaching and learning programs. The Division of Extension and Continuing Education provides the public with a wide spectrum of both credit and non-credit courses.

The Area Health Education Centers program and the Institute of Government are considered models for outreach efforts and the University has drawn national attention for its leading role in creating the Research Triangle Park.

The flagship institution of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, the University at Chapel Hill is the only state-supported institution of higher learning in North Carolina that has been elected to membership in the Association of American Universities, an organization of the 50 leading universities in the United States and Canada. Carolina became a member in 1922.

But excellence is not maintained by resting on institutional laurels.

Early in 1985 the University completed a year-long, detailed self-study concentrating on its role as a major American research institution. Strengths were highlighted as were areas where the need was seen for improvement.

"This study will help guide the University and the state into reinforced and advanced excellence as we approach the 21st century," says Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III.

Dr. John D. Kasarda, chairman of the faculty steering committee that prepared the report, calls it "a blueprint for development of the University into one of the top 10 research universities in the nation."

The need for the best of facilities also has been recognized. In the last two years, the University has dedicated the Walter Royal Davis Library, the Lineberger Cancer Research Center and the Hanes Art Center. Work proceeds on a new computer science building, an undergraduate chemistry laboratory building and the Kenan Center of North Carolina which will house an institute for the study of private enterprise.

The motivation for Carolina's continuing thrust forward is simple. In 1795 it became the first state university to open its doors and, as it approaches its bicentennial year, it is striving to remain first in as many ways as possible.

"In very few states can the most promising students truly reach for the stars at their own state-owned university, representing the best society has to offer," Fordham says.

"That the people have made these outstanding academic resources available—at such a modest cost—is part of the genius of the University of North Carolina."

Professor's Career Owes Much to Good Humor Ice Cream and FDR

By Kevin Sullivan
UNC News Bureau

When William Edward Leuchtenburg arrived at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1982, the last thing he needed was another hobby, another time-consuming interest.

Leuchtenburg, 62, William Rand Kenan professor of history, is a recognized authority on modern history, author, lecturer and television analyst.

He occasionally strayed from academic pursuits as a professor at Columbia University to enjoy a little bird-watching. But since he came to UNC, Leuchtenburg has added the Tar Heel sports teams to his list of passions.

While his feathered subjects do not require a ticket to enter the forest or arboretum, the Tar Heels do.

"Despite having a chair at this wonderful university, I don't rate high enough to get basketball tickets. I watch on television," Leuchtenburg says.

His interest in Tar Heel athletics has made him the target of an occasional practical joke by colleagues. Once, before an ACC basketball tournament game was about to begin on television, someone masquerading as an electric company official called Leuchtenburg, saying his power would be cut off—just before tipoff. An irate Leuchtenburg protested loudly over the telephone before realizing it was a prank.

Before coming to Chapel Hill, Leuchtenburg taught at Columbia University in New York from 1952 to 1982. He also taught at Harvard University, Oxford University, Smith College and New York University.

Despite his ties to the New York area, Leuchtenburg said he liked Chapel Hill and had no regrets about moving to a new university.

"At other universities newcomers often get lost, but that never happened here," he says.

The University welcomed Leuchtenburg to Chapel Hill in 1982 with an invitation to speak at University Day, the school's annual birthday celebration. In his address, Leuchtenburg warned against "fatalistic pessimism" about the world and said that "doom is not at hand."

Less than two years later, Leuchtenburg was asked to give the commencement address for the senior class in May 1984. He told the graduates that the invitation was "truly extraordinary... for one who has been a member of the faculty of this university for only 21 months."

In his commencement address, Leuchtenburg hailed UNC as a "university that bears the name of a single state, yet encourages an outlook that is not parochial but cosmopolitan."

In addition to his past professorships, Leuchtenburg has lectured extensively across the country and abroad and is national president of the Organization of American Historians.

He has been a National Endowment for the Humanities fellow, a Guggenheim fellow, a fellow with the National Humanities Center and a Mellon senior fellow at the National Humanities Center in the Research Triangle. He received his B.A. degree from Cornell University in 1943 and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University in 1944 and 1951 respectively.

Leuchtenburg specializes in the Leuchtenburg was the speaker at 1984 commencement exercises in Kenan Stadium.

Franklin D. Roosevelt era, an interest he developed before college, and has written several books about FDR. His book, "Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal, 1932-1940," won the Francis Parkman Prize of the Society of American Historians. He served as a consultant to the Franklin D. Roosevelt Centennial Committee and a recent book, "In the Shadow of FDR," was well-received when it was released in 1983.

A New York Times book reviewer said Leuchtenburg's volume "shrewdly sets forth the special cruelty of the dilemma Roosevelt's successors have all faced... Mr. Leuchtenburg's near-encyclopedic mastery of his material provides a lively, compelling and, I think, definitive narrative of those successive hauntings."

Leuchtenburg's interest in Roosevelt developed, perhaps by chance, during the summer of 1939 in Queens, New York looking for money to attend college. The young Leuchtenburg had received a scholarship from a New York state college, but not enough for Cornell's $400 tuition fee.

"In order to make up the difference, I got a job as a Good Humor ice cream man," he says. "Good Humor ice cream cost a dime, a huge sum in the Great Depression, and no one was buying any. Then a man in an ice cream truck drove up and told me that at the far end of my district Roosevelt was delivering a speech.

"The man told me that everyone watching Roosevelt was very hot, and that they would buy anything. I biked about 30 blocks, sold everything I had, and I got enough money to go to school. Even though I never laid eyes on Roosevelt, I guess in a way I owe him my college education."

In "Reagan's Secret Liberal Past," a cover story that Leuchtenburg wrote for "The New Republic" in 1983, he compared the political ideologies of Roosevelt and Ronald Reagan and discussed Reagan's fascination with Roosevelt.

"The interesting thing about it is that (Reagan) never stops talking about Roosevelt," Leuchtenburg said. Reagan mentioned Roosevelt in his nomination speech, his inaugural address and several other times, he says.

Leuchtenburg attended a luncheon at the White House for the Roosevelt Centennial in 1982 where Reagan "toasted FDR and happy days," Leuchtenburg says.

Leuchtenburg can be found in his fifth floor office in Hamilton Hall chatting with a student from one of his history classes (he is careful to schedule both graduate and undergraduate courses each semester) or banging out another treatise.

Although he writes extensively and spends time on the road lecturing, Leuchtenburg still finds time to play softball with students during the warmer months and basketball in Woollen Gymnasium in the winter.

His enthusiastic manner remains intact in front of a camera. Leuchtenburg has appeared on several television news shows and special programs. He appeared on ABC's "Nightline" in 1982 and has analyzed several elections for network television.

Recently, Leuchtenburg served as an advisor to a film about Louisiana's Huey Long that recently appeared in the New York Film Festival.

Leuchtenburg lives in Chapel Hill. He has three sons and three grandchildren. His youngest son Joshua recently passed the bar examinations after finishing at Columbia Law School. His son Tom is in the energy field in Washington and has two children. His son Chris is with International Business Machines in Westchester County, N.Y. and has one child.

Leuchtenburg (right) marched in the Selma to Montgomery, Ala. civil rights march with the late Dr. Martin Luther King in March 1965. Left to right are John Hope Franklin, now a professor at Duke University, John Higham, now at Johns Hopkins, and Arthur Mann, currently at the University of Chicago. Notice the FBI helicopter in the upper right corner keeping a close watch on the march.

In 1965, Leuchtenburg was invited to the White House to interview President Lyndon Baines Johnson for a magazine article. With them is Hayes Redmon, an assistant to LBJ press secretary Bill Moyers.

Chapel Hill is at the heart of North Carolina's future. And Mill Creek is at the very heart of Chapel Hill. President William C. Friday

William Friday, President of the University of North Carolina system, is a regular visitor at Tar Heel games on football Saturdays.

His keen interest in athletics dates back to his high school days in Dallas, N.C. where he played football and wrote sports for the Gastonia Gazette.

Since that time academics and administrative duties have taken precedence as he has become one of the most highly respected university officials in the nation.

A native of Raphine, Va., Friday attended Wake Forest College for one year before entering North Carolina State College, now North Carolina State University. He graduated in textile engineering in 1941.

Following graduation he became assistant to the dean of students at State. He served as a Naval officer during World War II and, after the war, entered the Carolina Law School, graduating in 1948.

He accepted a position as Assistant Dean of Students at Carolina and, in 1951, was appointed administrative assistant to Gordon Gray, President of the University. When Gray resigned in 1955 and his temporary successor, J. Harris Parks, also resigned, Friday became Acting President. He was named President of the University in 1956, the youngest president of a major university in the country.

During his administration, the University has experienced an unparalleled expansion. It has grown from three campuses to the present 16. New academic programs have taken scholarship to a new high and enrollment has grown from approximately 15,000 in 1955 to over 120,000 today.

As President of the University of North Carolina, Friday has been a key advisor to presidents. He was chairman of two presidential task forces on education and headed the President's Commission on White House Fellows.

He has headed national organizations, foundations, commissions and organizations ranging from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching to the American Council on Education and the Association of American Universities.

His involvement in these many other activities has brought national recognition to himself and to the University. A recent honor was the American Council on Education's Distinguished Service Award which has been presented only six times to national leaders in education.

He is married to the former Ida Wil- la Howell of Lumberton. They have three daughters, Frances, Mary and Elizabeth.

He has announced his plans to re- tire in July 1986. His strong leadership over the past 30 years has helped to develop a university system widely emulated as a model system of public higher education.

Chancellor Christopher Fordham

As its chancellor since 1980, Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III has led the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to ever stronger standing as one of the nation's greatest academic, research and service institutions.

In report after report the University has placed among the top two dozen colleges and universities in the nation and at the top among those in the South or Southeast. Measured by its reputation among peers, the productivity of its faculty and graduates and its success in attracting federal and other outside funds for research and programs. It has been found excellent.

Building upon those honors, Fordham has directed the University into new areas critical to the nation's future.

Significant attention has been paid to programs that assist the public schools, including the Lyndhurst Fellowship Program, which supports bright students who will become the best teachers; the Center for Mathematics and Science Education which works to increase the supply of qualified secondary school mathematics and science teachers; a College of Arts and Sciences program of workshops and internships for writing and foreign language teachers; and other innovative activities.

Another area of emphasis has been the incorporation of technology into all appropriate areas of academia. The College of Arts and Sciences is conducting a computer-aided curriculum development program with support from IBM Corporation, in which computers are being used in language tutorials, English composition and other areas.

The University also is constructing a new computer science building which will assist faculty members in that area in pursuing the most advanced research. Teaching in computer science has been enhanced by a teleclassroom facility which enables classes to be taught concurrently at Carolina and Duke University with full two-way communication.

Success in these areas of emphasis has not come at the expense of other programs.

Great strides in the health professions were made while Fordham was dean of the School of Medicine (1971-79) and vice chancellor for health affairs (1977-80). Programs were expanded, the faculty strengthened and minority enrollment increased.

The Area Health Education Centers program was begun as a way to bring physicians closer to the population and AHEC is now considered a national model for decentralized health education. A new cooperative effort among the health affairs schools has led to the creation of a Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention.

In the Academic Affairs the implementation of a new curriculum has incorporated basic skills in English, mathematics and foreign languages as well as broad perspectives in science, in Western and non-Western culture, in aesthetics and in the humanities.

The School of Business Administration and the William R. Kenan Jr. Charitable Trust, have begun a center for the study of private enterprise to be housed in the Kenan Center, now under construction with non-state funding.

A Greensboro native, Fordham is the son of an alumnus and he met his wife Barbara while they were at Chapel Hill. Their children also have attended the University.

Fordham earned his certificate in medicine from the then two-year medical school at UNC in 1949 and his M.D. from Harvard University.

He has held national leadership roles in the Association of American Medical Colleges and the National Council of Deans and Southern Regional Deans.

Fordham is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, a fellow of the American College of Physicians and a member of the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine, serving on its governing council.

He is an accomplished researcher and has written widely on health policy.

But above all, Fordham is the leader of the University at Chapel Hill, a job he continues to approach with missionary zeal.

"The University, I think, has a very special role," he says, "because it's where the youngsters can reach for the stars. There are 13-year-olds all over the state of North Carolina who are striving to make better grades for one reason right now at this stage in their lives—so they can go to Carolina. And that's a wonderful aspiration for them to have."

Athletic Director John Swofford

In just five years as athletic director at the University of North Carolina, John Swofford has established himself as one of the most respected administrators in intercollegiate sports.

Swofford is in charge of one of the nation's best all-around athletic programs. Tar Heel football and basketball teams annually rank among the finest in America. In addition, Carolina fields outstanding teams in men's and women's non-revenue sports.

Although just beginning his sixth year in this position, Swofford has already seen Tar Heel teams win 31 Atlantic Coast Conference championships and seven national collegiate titles—one in basketball, two in lacrosse and four in women's soccer. Carolina's football team has played in four bowl games in the past five seasons. The Tar Heels have also won or tied for first place in the race for the Carmichael Cup, symbolic of overall athletic excellence in the ACC, for the past five years.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina successfully completed a $34,000,000 fund-raising drive to construct a student activities center which will include a 22,000-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. Plans call for an addition to Kenan Fieldhouse, the Student-Athlete Development Center, to be built after the 1985 football season. This building, a one-of-a-kind facility, will include the most modern equipment to aid student-athletes in their studies and physical development.

Since Swofford became athletic director, a new tennis stadium and clubhouse have been built; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the Tar Heel baseball team; three new holes have been completed at Finley Golf Course; the football practice fields have been rebuilt and lighted; a new AstroTurf playing field installed; and the Fetzer Field track has been resurfaced.

In addition, the automation of the Athletic Department has been completed; the University has hosted the NCAA Golf Championships, an NCAA regional baseball tournament, the AIAW National Soccer Tournament, the AIAW National Softball Tournament and the NCAA Women's Soccer Championships; the academic support staff has been expanded; and major changes have been made in future Tar Heel football schedules.

Swofford has served as chairman of the NCAA Football Television Committee for the last year, a time in which the NCAA has faced one of its biggest problems—the dispute over football television rights. He is also a member of the NCAA Football Post-Season Bowl Committee and is past chairman of the ACC Television Committee.

These accomplishments are a good indication Swofford is well aware of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics and how to cope with them. But Chancellor Christopher Fordham knew that when he named him to replace Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980.

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford first came to Carolina as a Morehead Scholar in 1967. He graduated in 1971 with an A.B. in psychology and industrial relations.

He played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971.

In 1973 he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University. In his time there Swofford served as a graduate assistant to the assistant business manager of athletics.

From 1973 to 1976 he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities and finance at the University of Virginia.

He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs. Among his many other responsibilities were handling fund-raising affairs, team travel and the athletic dining hall. He also coordinated sports camps.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the athletic department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures, membership services and fund-raising.

Swofford is a member of the National Association of Collegiate Athletic Directors and is on the alumni advisory board for the Ohio University Sports Administration program. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University in 1984.

Swofford serves on the board of directors of the Chapel Hill Ronald McDonald House and North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill. He is also on the board of directors of North Carolina Amateur Sports which is handling the 1987 Olympic Festival. In addition, he is on the board of trustees of the Pop Warner Little Scholars, Inc. and a member of the 1984-85 University Planning Committee and the 1984-85 Chancellor's Task Force on University Development.

He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

Head Coach Dick Crum

Dick Crum heads into his eighth season as head football coach at the University of North Carolina as one of the most successful and highly-respected men in his profession.

Counting four years at Miami of Ohio, Crum has compiled an overall record of 89-35-3 in 11 seasons as a college coach. That's a winning percentage of .713, the seventh-best among the top coaches in the game.

Under Crum, Carolina has finished in the Top 20 of the national wire service polls four of the past six years. That includes rankings of ninth and 10th in 1980 and eighth and ninth in 1981, making Crum the only coach in Atlantic Coast Conference history to have a team finish in the Top 10 of both national polls for two straight years.

Crum also has an incredible record in post-season play. Counting two wins at Miami, he is 6-1 in bowl games. His victories have come over Michigan, Arkansas, Georgia, South Carolina and Texas twice. He won four straight bowl games at Carolina from 1979 to 1982. No other ACC coach has ever won more than two straight bowl games. In 1980, Crum won ACC and District III Coach-of-the-Year honors.

Now the dean of ACC coaches, Crum took the Carolina job in January, 1978. Prior to coming to Chapel Hill, Crum had compiled a 34-10-1 record in four seasons at Miami.

In announcing the selection of Crum as Bill Dooley's replacement, Carolina Chancellor Ferebee Taylor said, "Dick Crum was the unanimous choice of our nominating committee to be the new football coach.

"Coach Crum's outstanding record at Miami University speaks for itself and we are confident that under his leadership, our football program will continue to maintain Carolina's high standards of excellence."

In his seven seasons at Carolina, Crum is already the third-winningest coach in school history with a 55-25-2 mark. He needs just five wins to pass Hall of Famer Carl Snavely and take the number two spot on the victory list.

Crum has produced seven first-team All-Americans in the last five seasons—outside linebacker Lawrence Taylor and offensive guard Ron Wooten in 1980, offensive guard David Drechsler in 1981, Drechsler and defensive tackle William Fuller in 1982 and Fuller and offensive tackle Brian Blados in 1983.

Taylor was the ACC Player of the Year in 1980 and has been the NFL Defensive Player of the Year for the past four seasons. Bryant was the most valuable player in the United States Football League during its first year of operation. Ethan Horton, the ACC Player of the Year last fall, was the first running back taken in last spring's NFL draft, proving Crum to have been correct four years ago when he moved Horton from quarterback to tailback.

In his seven years at Carolina, Crum has coached nine 1,000-yard rushers. In that short period he has already produced three of Carolina's top five career leaders in rushing, passing and total offense.

A native of Youngstown, Ohio, Crum attended Boardman High School and then enrolled at Muskingum College. He later transferred to Mount Union College where he received his B.S. degree in 1957, majoring in mathematics with a minor in physics. He also holds an M.Sc. from Western Reserve.

The first six years of his coaching career were spent as an assistant at Boardman High, Sandusky High and Warren Harding High, all in Ohio.

Crum accepted his first head coaching position in 1963 at Mentor High School in Mentor, Ohio. He compiled a six-year record of 50-9-1, winning three league championships.

He joined Bill Mallory's Miami staff as defensive backfield coach in 1969.

He was appointed defensive coordinator in 1970 and held that position for four years.

When Mallory left Miami to become head coach at Colorado after the 1973 season, Crum was named his successor. He won three Mid-American Conference championships in four years there and twice took teams to the Tangerine Bowl.

Miami is known as the "cradle of coaches." Other former coaches at the Oxford school include Woody Hayes, Ara Parseghian, John Pont, Bo Schembechler and Mallory.

Like all those men Crum was extremely successful at Miami. He was selected Ohio Coach of the Year in 1974 and 1975, MAC Coach of the Year in 1974 and District Five Coach of the Year in 1974 and 1977. His 1974 squad finished the season ranked 10th in the wire service polls, the highest rating of any team in MAC history. His three MAC championships are the most ever won by a Redskin coach.

Twice Crum was selected to serve as head coach in the Ohio Shrine Bowl Game. He has also been on coaching staffs in the All-America Bowl, the Coaches' All-America Game and the Japan Bowl.

Crum has served on several committees of the American Football Coaches Association and is currently a member of the AFCA's board of trustees.

While at Miami, Crum had been considered for other head coaching jobs. However, he had always asked that his name be withdrawn from consideration.

"I had been interviewed at other schools," he says, "but I always left those meetings with very mixed feelings and emotions. After I interviewed at Carolina, I had no such qualms. On the plane ride back to Ohio I told my wife, 'If they offer me the job, I'm going to accept.'

"The thing that influenced me more than anything else is the fact that Carolina is an excellent academic institution as well as a home of great athletics."

In his spare time Crum enjoys fishing and the outdoors in general. Each summer his family takes a two-to-four week fishing trip to Canada. Their vacation spot is in an area just north of North Bay.

Crum also has a great interest in flying. He obtained his pilot's license in the summer of 1980.

In 1984 Crum received the Alumni Service Award from Mount Union College, the highest honor his alma mater bestows on an alumnus. It was "presented in recognition of outstanding achievement in chosen or professional fields, service to the college and community service."

Dick is married to the former Shirley Moncur of Delaware, Ohio. She is an Ohio University graduate with degrees in physical education and library science. They have three sons—Mike, 22, and twins, Jeff and Joel, 20.

Tar Heel Assistant Coaches

Bobby Cale

(Offensive Backs)

Coaching the Carolina running backs is Bobby Cale, now in his fourth season on the job.

Cale, a former star Tar Heel player, worked on the Carolina staff for two years as a graduate and part-time assistant coach. He became a full-time staff member in the spring of 1982.

During his playing days in Chapel Hill, Cale was a four-year starter at cornerback. He led the Atlantic Coast Conference in interceptions in 1976 with five and finished his career with 12, tying him for second place on the school's all-time interception list.

After graduating in 1979, Cale signed a free agent contract with the Seattle Seahawks. He then returned to Chapel Hill that fall to serve as a graduate assistant under Dick Crum.

After spending one year in private business, Cale came back to Carolina in 1981 as a part-time assistant. He was elevated to a full-time post after Cleve Bryant resigned to join the New England Patriots' staff.

A native of Middletown, Del., Cale and his wife, Emily, have a daughter, Charmain.

Bobby Cale

Fred Chatham

Marc Dove

Chatham returned to Chapel Hill in 1981 and was a part-time assistant for the Tar Heels for two seasons. He was elevated to a full-time spot when NCAA rules were changed in 1983, allowing schools to hire a ninth assistant.

A fine all-around athlete, Chatham played on Virginia state prep football championship teams at Woodberry Forest in 1968 and 1969.

Chatham and his wife, Pam, are expecting their first child later in the fall.

After three seasons there Dove was named defensive backfield coach at Mississippi State in 1978. He was appointed the Bulldogs' defensive coordinator in February, 1982.

Dove was a three-year regular during his playing days at Texas Tech. A defensive back, he was named Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Year in 1971.

In high school, Dove played on a state championship team at San Angelo, Texas.

Marc and his wife, Judy, have two sons—Zachary Paul and Seth.

Fred Chatham

(Tight Ends)

After assisting Dale Evans in the secondary last year, Fred Chatham will coach the Carolina tight ends this fall.

A former North Carolina high school coach, Chatham is in his third year as a full-time member of Dick Crum's Tar Heel staff.

Chatham, a native of Elkin, N.C., is a 1974 Carolina graduate. He was a Dean's List student and played on the varsity baseball team here.

He began his football coaching career at Elkin High School in 1977 as an assistant. He served as head coach there from 1978 to 1980 and was named Tri-County Coach of the Year in 1979.

Marc Dove

(Defensive Backs)

Marc Dove will be working with players in the defensive secondary in his second year on the Tar Heel staff.

Dove coached Carolina's outside linebackers last season. Now, in the Tar Heels' revised defensive scheme, he will work with the cornerbacks and free safeties.

Dove came to Carolina from Mississippi State in the winter of 1984. He had been the defensive coordinator there for two years.

A 1972 graduate of Texas Tech, Dove worked as a graduate assistant at his alma mater for one year and then spent two seasons as a full-time member of the Red Raider staff. He went to South Carolina in 1975.

Bobby Elliott

(Wide Receivers)

Beginning his third year on the Tar Heel staff is Bobby Elliott, who coaches the Tar Heel wide receivers.

Elliott came to Carolina in February, 1983.

A native of Iowa City, Iowa, Elliott was a two-time Academic All-America defensive back at the University of Iowa in 1974 and 1975. A history major with a 3.8 grade point average, Elliott was awarded post-graduate scholarships by both the NCAA and the National Football Foundation.

He began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at Iowa in 1976 and then served as defensive backfield coach at Kent State in 1977. In 1978 Elliott moved to Ball State where he coordinated the defense and coached the secondary for two years.

Elliott then coached the defensive backs at Iowa State for three seasons. He worked briefly at N.C. State in 1983 before coming to Chapel Hill.

Elliott is the son of Bump Elliott, the former head football coach at Michigan and currently the director of athletics at Iowa.

Bobby and his wife, Joey, have a son, Grant, and a daughter, Jessica.

Dale Evans

(Defensive Backs)

One of the most respected defensive coaches in college football is Dale Evans, who will work with the players at Carolina's two strong safety positions this year.

Randy Walker begins his first season as Carolina's offensive coordinator. Here he converses with former UNC quarterback Scott Stankavage.

Defensive coordinator Denny Marcini's units have led the ACC in total defense three of the past five seasons.

Evans, beginning his third season in Chapel Hill, came to Carolina in February, 1983 from the University of Colorado. He had been defensive coordinator there and also worked with the Buffaloes' inside linebackers.

A native of Pierce, W. Va., Evans attended West Virginia University where he received his undergraduate and master's degrees. A walk-on football player, he was the Mountaineers' starting quarterback and free safety for two seasons.

He began his coaching career at Sisterville High School in Sisterville, W. Va. He coached there in 1963 and 1964 before becoming an assistant at Salem College in West Virginia for two years. He then served as head coach at Salem for one season before taking the job as freshman coach at West Virginia.

After two years at his alma mater, Evans spent two seasons at Texas Tech and eight at South Carolina. He worked with the secondary all 12 of those years. He then went to Colorado for the 1982 season before joining Dick Crum's Carolina staff.

Evans and his wife, Joann, have two sons, Kelly and Tracy. Tracy played football at South Carolina, graduating last spring.

Ted Gill

(Defensive Linemen)

Ted Gill heads into his second year on the Carolina staff as coach of the Tar Heel defensive linemen.

A 15-year veteran in collegiate coaching, Gill joined Dick Crum's staff in the summer of 1984. He came to Carolina from Army where he had also been working with the defensive front.

Gill, a 1970 graduate of Idaho State, was a two-time All-Big Sky defensive tackle for the Bengals. After graduation, he stayed on at Idaho State and coached the freshmen in the fall of 1970 as a part-time assistant. He spent the next three seasons as a full-time staff member with responsibilities in the offensive and defensive lines.

Gill then spent two seasons each at Utah and New Mexico State before going to Ball State in 1978 for four years. He coached the defensive line in his first two seasons there and served as defensive coordinator in the last two.

He coached the defensive line at Cornell in 1982 before going to West Point in 1983.

Ted and his wife, Gloria, have three children, Nichole, Erica and Tracy.

Denny Marcini

(Defensive Coordinator and Linebackers)

Denny Marcini is beginning his eighth year as coordinator of the Carolina defense.

In addition to running the entire defense, Marcini also works specifically with Carolina's inside linebackers.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Marcini was a two-way tackle at Miami University. He received all-conference honorable mention his senior year.

After graduating in 1964, he served as an assistant football coach at Lakewood St. Edward High School for eight years. He was head coach there for two seasons and had an overall record of 17-2-1.

Marcini returned to Miami in 1974 to coach the offensive guards and centers. He was named the Redskins' defensive coordinator in 1977 and assumed that same position when he joined Dick Crum at Carolina seven years ago.

Marcini and his wife, Betsey, have four children—Jeff, Denny, Melinda and Susie. Denny is a freshman at Carolina this fall.

Bill Stewart

(Offensive Linemen)

The newest member of the Carolina staff is Bill Stewart who will coach the Tar Heel offensive line.

Stewart came to Chapel Hill last spring from the U.S. Naval Academy where he also worked with offensive linemen.

A native of New Martinsville, W. Va., Stewart is a 1975 graduate of Fairmont State. He served as a team co-captain in his senior year there and played on two conference championship teams as a center and guard.

Stewart began his coaching career at Sisterville High School in West Virginia before joining the staff at Salem College for the 1977 and 1978 seasons. He then spent one year as a part-time assistant under Dick Crum at Carolina.

After working at Marshall University in 1980, Stewart then spent three seasons at William and Mary. He was a member of Gary Tranquill's Navy staff last year.

Stewart is married to the former Karen Kacor.

Randy Walker

(Offensive Coordinator and Quarterbacks)

Quarterback coach Randy Walker is beginning his eighth season on the Carolina staff, but his first as offensive coordinator.

Walker worked with Tar Heel running backs in his first four seasons here before taking responsibility for the quarterbacks three years ago.

A 1976 Miami graduate, Walker played on Redskin teams which compiled a 32-1-1 record. His teams won three straight Mid-American Conference championships and three consecutive Tangerine Bowl titles.

Randy finished his playing career as the sixth-leading rusher in Miami history. He was selected the team's most valuable player in his senior year after playing tailback, fullback and wingback at different times during the season.

A native of Troy, Ohio, Walker was drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals after graduation. He worked for Dick Crum as a graduate assistant at Miami in 1976 and became a full-time staff member in 1977 as the Redskins went 10-1. He joined Crum at Carolina in 1978.

Walker and his wife, Tammy, have two children—a daughter, Abbey, and a son, Jamie.

Heel Appeal

You've gotta be tough to be a real fan. You fight hard bleachers, cold weather and crazy refs. When it's time for a little comfort, the Sheraton University Center warms you up.

Come relax in the atrium lounge. Work out the kinks in your pennant arm in our indoor pool and adjoining whirlpool bath. Stretch out in the oversized luxury guest rooms.

Take time out to check out Praline's, our cheery Southern style restaurant. Or really treat yourself with the continental cuisine of Oliver's Signature Restaurant.

On football weekends our Happy Hour kicks off at 9 a.m. and lasts right up to game time. Postgame, our lounge will keep the cheer going longer than a quarterback's pass, with draft beer by the glass and sandwiches by the ounce.

So the next time the home team's away from your home, stay at the Sheraton University Center. It's got Heel Appeal.

We're conveniently located only 12 miles from Kenan Stadium. For reservations, call 919/383-8575.

It's an action packed, non-contact session of football Tar Heel style at the annual Carolina Football Camp next mid-June. The participants will eat, sleep, practice and live in much the same manner as Carolina football players do.

The camp will be conducted by the University of North Carolina coaching staff. Jack Himebauch serves as director.

A number of former Carolina greats who are now NFL standouts will be in attendance to work with the campers.

During each 3-day session, campers will receive expert instruction in the fundamentals of football. Boys will be grouped by size, age and ability at all times for their workouts.

Don't delay. Get your application from the Football Office soon.

A session at football camp makes a great Christmas present!

Carolina coach Dick Crum is already the third-winningest coach in Tar Heel history heading into the 1985 season. He has a record of 55-25-2 in seven years. Ahead of him in wins are Bill Dooley with 69 in 11 years and Carl Snavelly with 59 in 10 years.

UNC's series with Virginia is the sixth-longest in collegiate football history with 89 meetings to date between the two teams. The longest series is that between the Badgers of Wisconsin and the Golden Gophers of Minnesota at 94 meetings.

Senior linebacker Troy Simmons led the Tar Heels in tackles in 1984 with 162 total hits. He had 86 solo tackles and 29 assists. He also had six tackles for losses, recovered two fumbles and intercepted a pass.

Carolina's longest current winning streak versus an ACC opponent heading into the 1985 season is six versus N.C. State. The Tar Heels have also won their last five meetings against Georgia Tech.

WE NEED TEAMWORK.

Rob Porter has been training for the 1988 Olympic Games for most of his young life. His dream is to make the team that will carry the "United States of America" banner into a stadium in Seoul, Korea.

But first Rob will be competing at the United States Olympic Festival VIII, July 15-26, 1987 in North Carolina. Hundreds of thousands of spectators plus millions of television viewers will watch as Rob makes his bid for a berth on the team.

Susan Tanner is a local university student from Durham. Although Susan wouldn't call herself an athlete, she loves sports just the same, thank-you. Any team in the ACC would be proud to have Susan as a fan.

Rob and Susan have never met. They will soon.

In fact, Susan will play a significant role in Rob's bid for a United States Olympic Festival medal. As a Festival volunteer, Susan will assist Rob with his housing and transportation needs, as well as attending to the mass of spectators on hand for his competition. So, in a very special way, Susan will be part of the team that wears the red, white and blue in 1988. It's teamwork that will make it happen.

Wide receiver Earl Winfield had a marvelous junior year for Carolina. He became the master of the circus catch and finished third in the ACC with 34 receptions. His best career performance came last year against Georgia Tech when he had seven catches for 92 yards.

Former Tar Heel tailback Ethan Horton holds the distinction of being the first running back chosen in last year's NFL draft. The Kannapolis, N.C. native led the ACC in rushing in both 1983 and 1984 and was chosen ACC Player-of-the-Year by the Associated Press last fall.

Great Plays from Carolina's Past

Rarely has a football play at the University of North Carolina been as carefully scrutinized and dissected as one known as "74 halfback" was in 1980.

The Tar Heels were playing at Texas Tech in a game being regionally televised by ABC Sports. In a tremendous defensive struggle, "74 halfback" accounted for the only touchdown in Carolina's 9-3 victory over the Red Raiders.

On their way to an 11-1 season, the Tar Heels were in Lubbock for the second game of the year. Playing on an astroturf field where ABC reported the temperature to be over 130 degrees, Carolina and Tech were both sensational defensively.

After the Red Raiders got a 36-yard field goal from Jesse Garcia on their first possession of the day, the two teams shut each other out the rest of the first half. In fact, no one even threatened to score.

However, the Tar Heels drove 74 yards in 10 plays on their first possession of the second half and tied the game on a 22-yard field goal by Jeff Hayes.

Later in the third quarter Tech finally mounted a drive and had a first down on the Carolina 20 in the fourth period's opening moments. However, Steve Streater intercepted a Ron Reeves pass in the end zone for a touchdown.

Taking the ball at their own 20, the Tar Heels moved quickly. Quarterback Rod Elkins (1) threw 21 yards to split end Jon Richardson (5) on first down. Kelvin Bryant (2) then ran off left tackle for one yard to the Carolina 42-yard line.

On second-and-nine, the Tar Heels ran "74 halfback." Instead of lining up in the traditional I-formation, Bryant and fullback Billy Johnson (3) came out as split backs. Bryant went in motion from left to right.

Elkins sprinted to the right after taking the snap. Wide receivers Richardson and Wayne Tucker (4), both lined up on that side, were flooding an area downfield. Bryant slipped into the area they had left and took Elkins' short pass.

The short pass turned into a 58-yard touchdown play. Bryant simply accelerated down the right sideline. Richardson and Tucker screened off the Tech left cornerback and Bryant outran the rest of the defense to the end zone. The snap on the PAT was fumbled, but the Carolina defense made the 9-3 score stand up.

"This used to be a pretty base part of our offense," says Randy Walker, the Tar Heels' offensive coordinator about the play. "We still use it some, but not as much as a few years ago. We ran this play a lot when Rod was here because he was such a good sprint-out passer.

"The play is not necessarily meant to go to the tailback. We pushed our two wide receivers up field and Kelvin ran a flat route behind them. It's a variation of some of the other flood patterns we've used.

UNC 9, Texas Tech 3 September 13, 1980 Jones Stadium, Lubbock, Texas

"On this particular play, the Tech strong safety was blitzing. Because of that, Rod didn't have time to look downfield. He just got it out to Kelvin."

"After that... well, Kelvin was just blessed with a lot of ability. When he got the ball in such open spaces, he was off."

The amazing thing about this game is that while it was televised, it moved very quickly. In fact, it moved too quickly for ABC. The network got in all of its commercial breaks, but the game ended 40 minutes before it had been anticipated.

"We were faced with probably the longest 'fill' in the history of college football," says Steve Davis, the former Oklahoma quarterback who was doing color commentary for ABC. "There were other regional games going on and we couldn't switch to New York for the scoreboard show until they were over. So, we were faced with filling 40 minutes on the air from Lubbock.

"The biggest problem, of course, was that only one touchdown was scored in the game. We didn't have a lot of offensive highlights to show. We must have replayed Bryant's touchdown a dozen times from all sorts of angles.

"We interviewed coaches and players and showed some of the big defensive plays, but we always came back to Kelvin's touchdown. No running back has ever gotten so much television exposure for one play."

Even as the College of Arts and Sciences at Carolina shimmers in its place among the top twenty institutions of higher learning in the country, and you and I bask in its reflected glory, we must be vigilant.

Other schools are reaching for the stars. The competition among first-rate schools to win and keep the brightest students and the most illustrious faculty grows daily more intense and costly. Star wars have begun, and stargazing is a poor defense.

The success of FOUNDATIONS FOR EXCELLENCE, the campaign to raise $10 million for the College of Arts and Sciences, will fix a firm course for the future. Please give generously to protect our position among the luminaries and to preserve the radiance of our Alma Mater, the brightest star of all.”

Reuben Davis Plays Close To Home, Keeps Opponents Out Of The End Zone

By Paul Gardner,
Sports Information Student Assistant

Two weeks ago Carolina held a 14-0 lead over Wake Forest's Demon Deacons with 10:42 remaining in the first half of a key Atlantic Coast Conference game. But the Deacons were threatening to score and cut the Tar Heels' lead in half.

There, in front of the H in Tar Heel in Kenan Stadium's east end zone stood Reuben Davis. Number 93 raised his big arms and flapped them like a whooping crane trying to take flight. Davis wasn't successful in flying but he got the Kenan Stadium crowd worked up and involved in the important goal-line stand that was about to begin. Four plays later Davis and the rest of the Tar Heel defense trotted off the field with a standing ovation ringing in their ears. The defense had stopped Wake Forest and set the tone for the rest of the day. Carolina went on to crush the Deacons 34-14.

That win was a special one for Davis, a sophomore defensive tackle from Greensboro.

"Last year when they beat us in Winston-Salem (14-3) they weren't too good about it," explains Davis. "Their fans sort of rubbed it in. There were signs that said, 'It's a long way back to Chapel Hill,' and we were hurt by that."

On this day, however, the Tar Heel defense made it a long way to the end zone for the Deacons. Carolina allowed over 300 total yards, but the Deacons couldn't score until less than six minutes remained in the contest.

Carolina's defense was hurt several times last year—and not just by opposing fans. But with more experience and the improvement of some key players, the defense is putting together some performances that it can be proud of this season. Davis is one of the biggest reasons for that pride.

Davis has the team's fourth-highest tackle total this year with 53 hits through five games. He has one sack and another tackle for a loss. In addition, he has pressured the quarterback into eight early throws this season. That matches his total of a year ago and reveals the improvement he's made in an area that the coaches expressed some concern over.

"Actually, I have less responsibility," says Davis of Carolina's new eight-man front. "I have to contain but I have the freedom to come in. I'm supposed to read the play and kind of linger outside. My first priority is to rush. The second is to contain and not let anyone outside."

Davis says he likes the new defensive system because it gives the Tar Heels more men who can rush the quarterback, but also puts more men on the line to stop the run. Of course, with the recent changes in rules and offenses the pass rush is crucial to a team's chances for victory.

Davis came to Carolina as a highly-recruited lineman from Greensboro Grimsley where he was an all-conference and all-metro selection. He was also named to the Greensboro Daily News' all-state team and the Roanoke Times' Top Five in North Carolina. He also lettered in track and won the state discus title his junior year. Davis thought about trying track at Carolina but decided to devote his time to football and academics.

That work is paying off. He started every game last year as a red-shirt freshman and finished third on the team in total hits with 131. He was named to The Sporting News pre-season All-America team earlier this year. And he's doing a fine job in the classroom, too.

"Hopefully, I can play professional football and then be a sportscaster," Davis says. "Even if I don't make the pros I want to go into radio and television. I used to always come from practice, Mom would have supper ready and at 6:20 p.m. I'd be in front of the television to watch Charlie Harville (of Channel 2 in Greensboro).

He's my favorite with his, 'That's the best in sports today.'"

The RTVMP major worked as a disc jockey this summer, "spinning" records for some of his friends' parties. During the second summer session he'd drive to Chapel Hill from Greensboro and do some disc jockeying for parties.

In fact, the easy access to Chapel Hill from his home in Greensboro is a primary reason the Tar Heels landed the blue chipper.

Davis' first year resulted in a trip to the Peach Bowl against Florida State. But he was red-shirted because William Fuller, a two-time All-America, had the defensive tackle position in his firm grasp. Davis says he wanted to be Fuller's backup when he arrived in Chapel Hill, but is glad he was red-shirted.

"It's good because you can graduate on time," Davis says. "You get to know the campus and since the coaches really are stressing academics I could hit the books and not worry about missing study time because of practice."

Today, since he didn't get to show Florida State his talents in that Peach Bowl, Davis is hoping he'll hit some Seminoles—and show them what they missed the first time.

Florida State University, a coeducational institution and a senior member of the nine universities in the state system, is located in Tallahassee, the capital of Florida.

The Florida State campus, located just a few blocks from the Florida Capitol, is considered to be one of the most beautiful in the Southeast. The 347-acre campus is covered with hardwoods, pines and palms as well as springtime greenery that combines the blossoms of camelias, azaleas and dogwoods.

The 22,000 students currently enrolled at Florida State learn from a faculty of 1,300 which includes four active members of the National Academy of Sciences. The University has 537 administrative and professional staff and 2,372 career service positions. Nearly 5,000 part-time employees, most of them students, also are on the payroll each year.

FSU was established in 1857, when the governor of Florida, James E. Broome, signed a bill establishing the Seminary West of the Suwannee in Tallahassee. The school consisted of one building located on 10 acres of land.

By 1860, the school, not yet a college, had an enrollment of 250. The president of the seminary organized the school into a four-year liberal arts college in 1887. At its first commencement in June 1891, degrees were conferred to two women and five men. Ten years later, the institution was renamed Florida State College. In 1905, it became Florida Female College, and in 1909 the name was changed to Florida State College for Women.

In 1945, FSCW took on the additional title, Tallahassee Branch of the University of Florida (TBUF) due to the fact that GIs stationed nearby were attending classes at the women's school, but, as men, they couldn't legally enroll.

Gov. Millard Caldwell signed a bill in 1947 making both the University of Florida and FSCW coeducational. FSCW became Florida State University.

Today, FSU offers students the opportunity to choose from more than 100 career options in arts and sciences, business, communication, criminology, education, home economics, law, library and information studies, music, nursing, social sciences, social work, theatre, and visual arts. Also available is the FAMU/FSU College of Engineering, which operates in cooperation with Florida A&M University.

The state Board of Regents has recognized Florida State for its continuing leadership at the graduate levels of education. An active program of basic research is maintained in a great variety of disciplines at FSU. The nuclear physics laboratory is ranked by the National Science Foundation as one of the top four in the nation.

Florida State's location in the state capital affords excellent study, research and internship opportunities in the areas of government, social sciences and policy sciences. The Capitol and Supreme Court are located close to the FSU College of Law.

THE ENEMY: RAIN

A mere 1/8" of rain could float your car off the road.

Hence the reason for Vector, Goodyear's superb handling all-season radial.

Vector's aggressive criss-cross tread actually pumps water away. To help your car maintain traction, even when the elements become hostile.

And Vector's performance advantages are enduring.

Even after thousands of miles of wear, Vector's deep tread and double-steel belts continue to give you outstanding traction and performance.

Vector

It simply performs like no other tire in the world.

There's More To Brad Lopp Than Meets The Eye

By Jeff Bradley
Sports Information Student Assistant

Sitting in the stands, a fan is likely to focus only on the man with the football. So when Kevin Anthony takes a snap and hands off to fullback Brad Lopp, all the eyes in Kenan Stadium zoom in on No. 27 as he batters his way to some tough yardage.

Lopp usually makes the most of his carries. He's called upon often in those crucial short-yardage situations. That's one part of Lopp's game that everyone can see. But there's more to this Jefferson, N.C., sophomore than meets the average fan's eye.

"We don't ask more out of any player on the field than we ask of Brad," Carolina offensive coordinator Randy Walker says. "The fullback is involved in all aspects of our offense. He probably has the most diverse role on the field."

Lopp's position requires strength, quickness and most of all, intelligence and concentration. His responsibilities include lead blocking for the tailback, providing pass protection for the quarterback, running and catching the football. Lopp handles all of these chores well and improves with each game.

"Brad has grown very well into the role of being our fullback," says Walker. "I'd never tell him that there are things he can't improve on, but remember, he's got a lot of football left to play before he's through."

Last year, Lopp gained some valuable experience, especially late in the season. He carried the ball 32 times for 149 yards and caught three passes for 42 yards. Lopp remembers the intensity he felt playing his first games as a Tar Heel.

"Last year it felt like I was going 100 miles an hour all the time," Lopp says. "It was my first experience in college ball and I didn't know what to expect. I just went out on the field with reckless abandon. I'd hit people and not even feel it."

Lopp doesn't appear to feel anything when he's on the field. He's a fiery competitor who doesn't hold back any emotion. Although he's not big for a fullback (6'1", 205 lbs.), he possesses more speed than the prototype.

"I think that my quickness is my greatest strength," Lopp says. "I think that I can get bigger and stronger, but speed creates power on impact."

Walker agrees that Lopp's speed is a strong point, but he thinks his fullback offers more than that.

"I think his greatest strength is his intelligence," Walker says. "We ask our fullback to learn a tremendous amount and he's handled it all very well. He's learned to stay in the game both mentally and physically."

While Walker praises the play of Lopp, the man is not so quick to praise himself. Lopp is the type of player who drives himself constantly and is always seeking ways to improve his game. He is probably his own worst critic.

"I think that I could work harder to get myself bigger and stay that way," Lopp says. "I think that I could play at 225 instead of 205. This year I came in at 215, but after three weeks of preseason practice, I lost it all. I need to keep the weight on."

Walker would like to see Lopp get bigger, but at the same time he's concerned the added weight may slow Lopp down.

"Size is only as important as what you do with it," Walker says. "We feel that Brad has the type of body that can get much bigger. But I'd hate to see him sacrifice any of that speed just to get bigger. Brad can have a very successful career without gaining another pound."

Lopp has practiced hard on his individual skills, but all of his goals are centered around the success of the Tar Heels.

"I want to win an ACC championship worse than anything else," Lopp says. "We have the ability and the talent. We practice very hard but we definitely have to improve our mental game. We can't leave our game on the practice field."

Lopp is one player who definitely has his mental perspective of the game in order. In a position that demands him to perform so many tasks, Lopp is willing to do it all.

"I'll run the ball as little or as much as the coaches want me to," he says, "whatever they feel it will take for us to win."

Many of the things that Lopp does to help the Tar Heels win games won't show up in the statistics or be seen by the fans. But he is definitely one player who deserves a look.

Fullback Brad Lopp churns for extra yardage against Virginia last season.

The Educational Foundation

Ernie Williamson

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation.

It is the Educational Foundation which makes possible all athletic scholarships awarded by Carolina.

As the Tar Heels' sports program has grown through the years, the Foundation has done likewise. It currently has over 6,500 members who finance a scholarship program that costs $1,800,000 a year.

"Since its inauguration in 1938, the Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, for over 4,000 student-athletes," says Ernie Williamson, the Foundation's executive vice-president.

Williamson feels the overall bonus of being a Foundation member is helping a worthy young student obtain a college education. He says the high caliber young athlete who is awarded a scholarship is a great representative of the University.

Any donation to the Foundation is welcome. However, membership in the Rams Club is restricted to those who contribute $150 or more.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and has already surpassed the $7,000,000 mark.

The endowment program consists of $50,000 endowed scholarships, life memberships of $15,000 and $30,000, wills and bequests and a new dimension—a pooled income fund. Under the pooled income plan, a member gives a principal sum to the Foundation and then receives the interest off that during the remainder of his life.

A special room on the south wing of Kenan Fieldhouse serves as a meeting place for Rams and their families. This area is open two hours before football games and provides a lounge and picnic area for those who come early.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Other members of the Foundation staff are Moyer Smith, John Cherry and Neal Harrell. Along with Williamson, Mary Baggett, Wendy Mann, Terri Bare, Jean Gunter, and Dawn McPherson, they have made the Foundation better able to serve its members.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last three years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

The man who stands at the helm of the Educational Foundation is popular Ernie Williamson, the executive vice-president.

The former star Carolina tackle is one of the most active individuals on the Tar Heel sports scene. He is constantly on the go—talking with Foundation members, speaking to prospective members or avidly following all of Carolina's athletic teams.

Williamson is a Carolina graduate with A.B. and M.A. degrees. The native of Crewe, Va. played one season of football here under Carl Snavely and was regarded as an outstanding tackle. He was lured away to professional football and played with New York and Washington before a knee injury ended his career.

Williamson returned to Chapel Hill to finish work on his degrees and then went to the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. He was an assistant coach there for two years and head coach for three seasons.

He returned to Carolina in 1957 to accept his present position. At one time he also served as a recruiter for the football program.

Ernie is married to the former Elva Smith of Lawrenceville, Va. They have a son, Wayne, and a daughter, Carole.

Tough Customers Choose Piedmont.

People who take flying seriously complain if an airline isn't performing. So you can imagine how proud Piedmont was last year when, according to Air Transport World magazine, we received fewer complaints than any other major airline.

It's one reason why Air Transport World recently named us, of all the world's airlines, the Airline Of The Year. And a reason why our record against the competition has been so good lately.

Carolina Blue

"Carolina Blue is the best college sports newspaper that I have ever seen. It keeps Carolina fans fully informed on all aspects of Tar Heel basketball and football, and the other sports here at the University. From the game stories to the locker room report to the detailed statistics, Carolina Blue is indeed unique. I have what you might call an 'inside view' as Carolina's basketball coach, but I still would not be without my Carolina Blue each week."

—Dean Smith

"Carolina Blue covers Tar Heel football from every angle. Our players and coaches look forward to reading it every week. For those fans who really want the inside view of Carolina football—the whole story—I strongly recommend Carolina Blue."

—Dick Crum

"Carolina Blue has been a great asset to our athletic department in its five years of publication. It keeps our friends informed on all UNC sports, and pays special attention to Tar Heel football and basketball. I strongly recommend the paper to Carolina fans."

—John Swofford

"You'll receive 40 issues that capture the color, the drama and excitement of Carolina sports. Coverage that is available no where else. In-depth coverage of the players, the coaches and the games by top sports journalists."

John Kilgo

Please start my subscription to Carolina Blue immediately. I understand I am to receive 40 issues of Carolina Blue during the next 12 months for the price of $25. That's $15 off the single-copy price for a savings of 38%.

Tar Heel Marching Band

The University of North Carolina marching band will continue in its 22nd season under the guidance of Major John Yesulaitis this year when it takes the field to entertain Tar Heel fans with its pre-game and halftime shows.

Major Y, as he is known on campus, is in his final year as the Tar Heels' band director, after taking over the job in 1964. Yesulaitis is a graduate of the University of Maryland and earned his master's degree from the Catholic University. Major Y was born in Coalsdale, Pa. and graduated second from his high school class. He went on to the Ernest Williams School of Music where he graduated first in his class.

Volunteer assistant director Allen Reep aids Major Y with the "Band of Champions." The Marching Tar Heels, with Major Y and Reep directing them, have performed on national television on several occasions and have accompanied the Tar Heel football team to 10 bowl games.

Drum major Jay Osborne returns this year as does Carolina Flag leader Donna Copley. The Marching Tar Heels' head majorette this year is Jo Harrell.

The majority of band members are non-music majors, so the membership is made up solely of volunteers. Hard work and long practices are normal fare for the Marching Tar Heels. Today, fans will watch the band as it plays the Old North State, the official state song, and as it forms the victory lane for the players' entrance onto the field as part of their pre-game show.

The Marching Tar Heels always include traditional band music in their performances, but also add spice to their presentation with contemporary songs.

Major Y is retired from the U.S. Air Force where he was associate conductor of the Air Force Band and Symphony Orchestra. Yesulaitis entertained every American president from Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Richard Nixon in that position. He has performed before such luminaries as Lord Mountbatten, Soviet Premier Nikita Krushchev and Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain.

Under Major Y, the band's membership has nearly tripled and the Marching Tar Heels have been labeled the "Pride of the ACC."

"I brought enthusiasm and a desire to put on a good program," Yesulaitis once said of his position. Those qualities will be missed when Major Y retires at the end of this year.

North Carolina is...

The Tar Heel State

North Carolina offers beautiful scenery, colorful history and gracious hospitality.

It's a veritable "Variety Vacationland," encompassing more than 300 miles of Atlantic beaches and the highest mountains in the Eastern United States. The Piedmont, with its rolling hills and bustling, urban centers, lies between these two main attractions.

Blessed with three geographic regions and four distinct seasons, North Carolina provides almost any leisure activity imaginable.

It was on North Carolina's Outer Banks that the English first landed in the New World four centuries ago and sought to establish a colony. The celebration of America's 400th Anniversary will continue until 1987, the year the first English child, Virginia Dare, was born in America.

As the nation's oldest state university, the University of North Carolina plays a significant role in the history of the state. On January 15, 1795, the University at Chapel Hill first opened its doors to students.

The vision of a recreational motor road became a reality when construction began on the Blue Ridge Parkway in September 1935.

Charles Kuralt, Carolina Class of '55, says it is one of the 10 most beautiful drives in America. High in the mountains of southern Appalachia, it's a road that fulfills a motorist's dream. It has been described as a "long corridor in a gallery, its alcoves lined with treasures of nature's own art." This picturesque road is the Blue Ridge Parkway, which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. Enjoy the artistic coloring of its leaves this fall and other breathtaking sights as you drive among the mountaintops on the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Linn Cove Viaduct—There is only a 7.7-mile stretch of highway around Grandfather Mountain that remains the missing link of the Blue Ridge Parkway's 469-mile span. A viaduct over Linn Cove at Grandfather Mountain has been built to connect this part of the Parkway so there will not be any interruption from Virginia's Shenandoah National Park to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. Even though the viaduct is finished, the entire segment of road will not be completed until 1987. The quarter-mile bridge includes spiral curves going into circular curves with a curvature in two directions, giving the bridge an S shape. The structure has seven supporting tiers that are 150 feet apart. It is constructed with 153 50-ton pieces of which only one is straight and no two are alike. The bridge had to be built from the top down because of the fragile and rugged terrain on the slopes of Grandfather Mountain. It is the only one of its kind in the United States and engineers from all over the world have come to see the bridge and learn from its construction. This engineering wonder was built over some of the oldest rock formations on earth in order to preserve the beauty and environment of the mountain. The bridge itself has become an attraction as it affords panoramic views and is such a construction marvel. Visitors can get a first hand look at the Linn Cove Viaduct, which is presently not accessible to traffic, by contacting the National Park Service for information on tours. (Photo by Hugh Morton).

Origin of the Tar Heels

In Colonial Days, North Carolina was a big producer of tar, pitch and turpentine.

During one of the fiercest conflicts of the Civil War, North Carolina troops felt they had been let down by a regiment carrying the colors of another state, and thus carried chips on their shoulders when they pulled back from the front after the battle.

"Anymore tar down in the Old North State, boys?" members of the other regiments taunted the battle-weary North Carolinians.

"Not a bit. Jeff Davis bought it all up," retorted the Carolinians.

"How's that, what's he going to do with it?"

"He's gonna put it on your heels to make you stick better in the next fight," answered the soldiers from the land of tar, pitch and turpentine.

General Lee, hearing of the incident, remarked: "God bless the Tar Heel boys."

The nickname stuck.

HERE COMES CAROLINA

Here comes Carolina-lina
Here comes Carolina-lina
We hail from NCU.
We've got the spirit in it
We've got the team to win it
We wear the colors White and Blue—
So it's Fight! Fight! Fight! For Carolina
As Davie did in days of old.
As we gather 'round the Well
Cheer that Tar Heel team like Hell—
For the Glory of NCU.

AYE! ZIGGA ZOOMBA

Aye zigga zoomba zoomba zoomba,
Aye zigga zoomba zoomba zay.
Aye zigga zoomba zoomba zoomba,
Aye zigga zoomba zoomba zay.
Roll 'em down
You Tar Heel warriors.
Roll 'em down
And fight for CAROLINA!

Carolina Songs

ALMA MATER

Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices
Ringing clear and true,
Singing Carolina's praises,
Shouting "NCU."

CHORUS

Hail to the brightest star of all!
Clear its radiance shine
Carolina, priceless gem,
Receive all praises thine.

REFRAIN

For I'm a Tar Heel Born
I'm a Tar Heel bred,
And when I die
I'm a Tar Heel dead.
So it's—
Rah, Rah, Carolina-lina
Rah, Rah, Carolina-lina
Rah, Rah, Carolina!
Rah! Rah! Rah!

CAROLINA VICTORY MARCH

There'll be a Carolina victory,
When cross the field the foe has fled.
Cheer that team to victory,
For we are Tar Heels born and bred.
Rah! Rah! Rah!
Glory, Glory, UNC.
Our hearts will live with thee
Fight! Fight! Fight!
For the Blue and White are rolling to victory.

TAR HEELS ON HAND

Tar Heels on hand
To steal the thunder from the sky.
Then take our stand
As every man does right by Blue and White.
We'll give the Tar Heels a hand
And cheer them on to do or die.
Yea, all of us are for UNC
And you can betcha we're proud to be
Tar Heels on hand!

The Sweet Carolines are a group of Tar Heel coeds who serve as official hostesses for Carolina football. By giving campus tours, talking with recruits' parents, answering questions about campus life and serving as hostesses at football functions, the Sweet Carolines try to make recruits feel at home during their visit to the University of North Carolina campus. They also help promote school spirit by selling Carolina Blue and white balloons before each home game. The Sweet Carolines are selected through a series of interviews with selections based upon personality, academics, attractiveness and loyalty to Carolina.

Members of this year's Sweet Carolines are:

Front Row—Lori Mills, Carol Hayes, Leslie Bennett, Suguna Kothapalli, Stephanie Mitchener, Kelly Clark, Cherie Evans, Arlene Ferebee.

Second Row—Rose Alston, Iris Wilfong, Marisa Richardson, Glenda Rice, Donna West, Cindy Tano, Sheri Sellers, Tremel Faison.

Third Row—Kim West, Sharleen Trimble, Phyllis Walls, Grace Mercer, Denise Sugg, Kathy Swicegood, Sheila Jackson, Audrey Boone.

Dear Alumni,

Join us as we follow our Tar Heels to Alaska for the Great Alaska Shootout Basketball Tournament. This year's line-up includes 1984 NCAA champion Villanova, plus Alaska-Anchorage, Arizona, Missouri, Nevada-Las Vegas, Purdue, and Texas-San Antonio.

We'll leave Raleigh at mid-afternoon on Thursday, November 28, stopping in Charlotte for those who wish to fly from there, and return home Monday night. We'll have tickets to all the tournament games (Friday, Saturday, and Sunday), plus time to explore one of our nation's most beautiful states! We've even planned a city tour of Anchorage and a trip to one of the area's most magnificent glaciers for a tour and special barbecue lunch.

Help us cheer our Tar Heels on to victory against some of the nation's best basketball teams and enjoy the incredible natural wonders of Alaska. Space on this tour is limited, so I urge you to make your reservations today!

Sincerely,

Doug Dibbert '70

Yours, at Carolina

Carolina People Know The Meaning of "Student-Athlete"

By Dave Lohse
Assistant Sports Information Director

It is a story we never tire of hearing. At the University of North Carolina the balance between athletics and academics is always kept in the proper perspective. And that was proved again resoundingly during the 1984-85 academic year.

Seventy UNC athletes earned mention on the 29th annual Atlantic Coast Conference Honor Roll. The Honor Roll lists those that participated in one of the 19 official conference sports and registered a grade point average of 3.0 or better for the full school year. A list of those 70 athletes is included at the bottom of this page.

Also during the course of the year, several athletes were designated for other awards. The magnificent Sue Walsh, who had a brilliant swimming career at UNC, was named a winner of the NCAA's Today Top Five Awards at the organization's annual convention last January in Nashville. She is the first Carolina athlete to ever be so honored. The award is based on athletic performance, leadership, character and academic achievement.

Later in the spring, two UNC athletes were named to Academic All-America teams chosen by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA). Soccer goalie Beth Huber was named a second team Academic All-America in the women's at-large category and lacrosse midfielder Joey Seivold was named a third team Academic All-America in the men's at-large area. Another lacrosse standout, goalkeeper J.B. Howard, was named one of the winners of the ACC Senior Scholarship Award, given annually to the senior athlete with the best GPA at the school. Track performer Janet Bean was named the female recipient for UNC.

Four Carolina athletes were also inducted into Phi Beta Kappa during the 1984-85 school year. They were Seivold, cross country and track performer George Nicholas, basketball player Gary Roper and football defensive back Steve Hendrickson.

Joey Seivold has been a two-time first team All-America midfielder for Coach Willie Scroggs' lacrosse team. Last year, he also made the ACC Honor Roll for the third year, was named third team Academic All-America and was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa.

Carolina Basketball Outlook

With nine returning lettermen, headed by All-America candidate Brad Daugherty, the University of North Carolina could again have one of the best teams in college basketball.

However, improvement will be needed from all of those players if Carolina is to have a chance of matching the accomplishments of last year's great team. The Tar Heels posted a 27-9 record last season, tied for first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference race and reached the Final Eight of the NCAA Tournament.

Unlike a year ago, when Carolina opened the season with three new starters, this will be a veteran squad. Daugherty, Steve Hale, Kenny Smith and Joe Wolf were regulars last season. In addition, the Tar Heels also return two part-time starters in Dave Popson and Curtis Hunter and a seventh player, Warren Martin, who saw extensive action.

Daugherty figures to be one of the premier players in the college game. A 6-11, 240-pound senior from Black Mountain, N.C., he led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rebounding last year with a 9.7 average, scored 17.3 points a game and shot 62.5 percent from the field, the eighth-best figure in the country. He and Maryland's Len Bias were the only players in the ACC to finish among the league's top 10 in scoring, rebounding, field goal percentage and free throw shooting.

While Daugherty gives the Tar Heels one of the nation's top pivotmen, Carolina also has one of the finest backcourts in the country in Hale and Kenny Smith.

Hale, a 6-3, 180-pound senior from Jenks, Okla., is a sensational defensive player who last year covered the opposition's hottest player, whether he was 6-0 or 6-7. He averaged 10.6 points a game, rebounded very well and led the ACC in free throw shooting with a school-record mark of 87.6 percent. He is now fully recovered from a shoulder injury suffered against Middle Tennessee State in the NCAA Tournament last season.

Smith had some brilliant games at point guard last year and the Tar Heels hope those will be commonplace this season. The 6-3, 165-pound junior from Queens, N.Y., broke Phil Ford's single-season assist record with 235 and also scored 12.3 points a game. He shot 51.8 percent from the field and 86.0 from the foul line. He also began to come on defensively, although continued improvement is needed there.

Returning to join Daugherty up front is Wolf, a 6-10, 235-pound junior from Kohler, Wis. He did a very good job in his first year as a starter, averaging 9.1 points and 5.3 rebounds. In addition, he was a good enough ballhandler to allow Carolina to use three big men in the lineup together quite a bit. However, he needs to be more consistent and continue to improve defensively.

The small forward position was manned by several different players last season with Popson, Hunter, Wolf and Buzz Peterson seeing the most action there.

By playing Popson or Wolf at that spot, the Tar Heels could put a very big lineup on the court. Popson is a 6-10, 210-pound junior from Ashley, Pa. who has improved in each of his first two years at Carolina. However, he must rebound better than he has in the past and show continued improvement in other areas, too.

Hunter, a 6-4½, 193-pound junior from Durham, N.C., gave the Tar Heels a quicker team when he was at forward last season. He has worked hard during the summer on his shooting and has the natural ability to be an excellent defensive player.

Another key figure is Martin, one of the biggest surprises in the ACC last year. The 6-11½, 240-pound senior from Axton, Va., has been plagued by injuries throughout his career, but did a sensational job in a reserve role last season. He scored 9.6 points a game, shooting 59.6 percent from the field, and averaged 5.5 rebounds. He also led the Tar Heels in blocked shots with 81.

Unfortunately, Martin suffered a stress fracture in his right foot late in the year. Because of that, he wasn't able to work out as much as had been hoped during the summer. He must continue his rapid improvement if Carolina is to have a great season.

Other returning lettermen are 5-11 walk-on James Daye of Burlington, N.C. and Ranzino Smith, a 6-1, 189-pound sophomore from Chapel Hill. Smith got some valuable experience in the backcourt after Hale was injured in the NCAA Tournament. Although he had a low field goal percentage last year, he is a good shooter. He needs to improve defensively to get more playing time.

Rounding out the squad will be four incoming freshmen—6-10 Marty Hensley of Marion, N.C.; 6-6 Steve Bucknall of London, England; 6-5 Kevin Madden of Staunton, Va.; and 6-2 Jeff Lebo of Carlisle, Pa.

Hensley is a good prospect who needs to gain some weight and strength. Bucknall and Madden could challenge for playing time at small forward if they can pick up the fundamentals needed at that position. Both need to become better rebounders and better defensive players.

Lebo may have an easier time making the transition to college basketball because he has already learned to play without the ball. If he comes on defensively, he and Ranzino will provide backup help for the starting guards.

This Carolina team will be trying to uphold an amazing tradition. The Tar Heels have averaged almost 26 wins a year for the past 19 seasons, finished either first or second in the ACC standings for each of those 19 years and made 11 straight trips to the NCAA Tournament, the longest current streak in the nation.

Carolina's Homecoming Is on a "Rampage" for Tradition

By Tamera Majors
Sports Information Student Assistant

The University of North Carolina is a school marked by tradition.

The first state-supported university in America, Carolina is the only state university to have graduated students in the 18th century. It is a school blessed with such distinguished and diverse alumni as author Thomas Wolfe, President James Knox Polk, actor Andy Griffith, television journalist Charles Kuralt and sportscaster Jim Lampley.

With distinguished alumni and a strong heritage, one would think that Carolina's Homecomings would be something of a marvel. Homecoming should be a time of revelry and exuberance—a time when alumni should flock to the almost 200-year-old campus and renew old friendships and engage in the weekend's festivities. However, a traditional homecoming characterized by spirited and unified events is something that history shows is just not the case at Carolina.

According to Ernie Williamson, Executive Vice-President of the Educational Foundation, this year marks the first time in a decade that Carolina has gone "all out."

Due largely to the efforts of Mark Pavao, Carolina Athletic Association President, and the homecoming committee, this year's homecoming celebration turns back the hands of time to when homecoming meant a cliff-hanger of a football game, a beautiful queen and a slow dance on a crowded Woollen Gym floor. The homecoming committee began work last spring to plan and organize this return to tradition.

"The strength of UNC lies in its tradition," Pavao says. "Everything about UNC is strong in tradition and we wanted this to be true for homecoming as well."

"Homecoming is bringing alumni back and alumni feel more comfortable in a setting with tradition," Pavao adds.

Marc Wright, vice-president of the Homecoming Committee, views homecoming weekend as a time to unite students and alumni, to promote spirit and to initiate excitement.

"With all else going on in the fall in conjunction with all of the home football games, there has been a desire from students (as revealed last spring during the door-to-door campaign by Pavao's staff) to have one climax weekend," Wright says.

"We need a weekend when there's a lot

Homecoming committee members hope to recapture some of the spirit of the 1966 Homecoming which featured a bonfire, parade, the crowning of a Homecoming to do and everyone has a good time. It adds to tradition to have activities, big events. We should have the biggest and best homecoming because we are a premiere university," he says.

Wright describes the committee's goal as a desire to start a 1980's tradition of "that old hoopla of past homecomings." The committee organized this year's events under the theme, "Rampage '85: A Carolina Homecoming." The events began last Wednesday evening with a guest appearance by ABC sports commentator and UNC alumnus Jim Lampley in Memorial Hall.

The selection of a male homecoming queen two years ago exemplified the need to reestablish the regard for Carolina's Homecoming. Last year, there was no homecoming court and no "hoopla." Instead, the Carolina Pride Award was given to the senior who possessed academic and extra-curricular leadership, along with school spirit. People then realized that homecoming needed to take a turn at UNC or be dead forever. The Carolina Athletic Association election was largely based on the issue of what to do about homecoming.

According to Wright, homecoming at Carolina did not change through the years with the tastes and interests of the University, thus the excitement died down. The activities no longer corresponded with the times.

"Rampage '85" has attempted to include a vast selection of events with the spirit of the game, the quality of the parade and the selection of the queen as showcases.

For the last decade it seems, homecoming at UNC has been dying out. There has been a lack of spirit and fervor. Now, in 1985, homecoming tradition is on a "Rampage," one which homecoming committee members hope lasts well into the future.

Tar Heel Trivia

Back for its second year on these pages is our version of the board game Trivial Pursuit done in Tar Heel athletic style. We ran this feature in our football programs last year and got a lot of positive responses to the idea. Every week this fall we'll come at you again with questions to tease the minds of the most avid of Tar Heel fans. We'll present six Trivial Pursuit cards each week with questions in six categories—Football, Basketball,

Non-Revenue Sports, Statistics, Dates & Places and People. Answers to the quiz will be printed every week on page 87, but please—no cheating! If you have any questions you think would be fit to print, please submit them to Dave Lohse, Assistant Sports Information Director, University of North Carolina, P.O. Box 2126, Chapel Hill, NC 27514.

Kenan Stadium

Nestled among the tall pine trees near the center of the Carolina campus is Kenan Stadium. It is here in this beautiful natural valley that Tar Heel football teams have played their games for 57 years.

Kenan Stadium is generally referred to as one of the most beautiful football arenas in the country. Considering its majestic setting among the Carolina pines, some say it is the most beautiful. Little can be done to actually enhance its natural beauty. In fact, most of the work on the stadium has been directed toward keeping up the natural setting.

Inside Sports magazine has rated Kenan Stadium one of the five best places in America to watch a college football game. For scenery, atmosphere and charm, it can't be surpassed.

William Rand Kenan, Jr., an 1894 Carolina alumnus and international industrialist, built the stadium as a memorial to his parents, William R. Kenan and Mary Hargrave Kenan. Construction began in November 1926 and was completed the following August.

The first game in Kenan Stadium was played November 12, 1927 with Carolina beating Davidson 27-0.

Heading into the 1985 season, Carolina's record in Kenan is 178-105-15. Although the stadium's original capacity was 24,000, the present capacity totals 50,000. Over the last 57 years, crowds in excess of 50,000 have filled Kenan on 20 occasions. The stadium attendance record is a crowd of 53,689 for the 1983 Clemson game.

Unmatched quality. In case you haven't heard.

Once again Sansui delivers grandstand plays! Our new Intelligent Super Compo music systems offer unmatched sound quality and remote control convenience.

For instance, our IS-1100P system offers the only microcomputer controlled remote that lets you operate the graphic equalizer with preset memory—from anywhere in the room.

As an added plus, only Sansui gives you individually powered components for unmatched performance. Plus outstanding features like Sansui's exclusive One-Touch Compu Selector Control that lets you instantly switch from one component to another; and a multi-function remote control that lets you call the plays right from the sidelines.

When it comes to musical pleasure and operating ease, nobody scores as high as Sansui. Once you experience our Intelligent Super Compo music systems, you won't be remotely interested in any other.
