Tonight's Game: Tulane vs. Florida State

By Lenny Vangilder

One of the nation's premier football programs brings its show to the Superdome carpet tonight.

The Florida State Seminoles have no doubt put themselves among the elite in college football. Why?

- Since 1987, FSU has spent all but six weeks in the nation's top 10, including a preseason No. 1 ranking in 1988,

- Since the 1986 All-American Bowl, the Seminoles have won 35 of 39 games.

- In the last five years, 60 Florida State players have been named to at least one All-American team.

FSU provides what is undoubtedly the stiffest challenge to date for Tulane's Green Wave. But a few career performances and good bounces of the ball could put the Wave on the front page of every sports section in America tomorrow morning.

It's happened before. The first time these two teams met in 1983, FSU came to town with a 2-0 record and a No. 9 ranking by the Associated Press. They left with a 34-28 defeat at the hands of the Wave, an upset Seminole coach Bobby Bowden calls one of the biggest with which he's been associated.

The series record doesn't reflect that win, since Tulane later had to forfeit that game because it used an ineligible player. Regardless, that game gives Wave fans a reminder of what could be.

Now, on matters at hand tonight...

When Tulane has the ball:

For the first time in the Greg Davis era, Tulane has put together back-to-back games of more than 200 yards running and throwing the football. That balanced attack has led to convincing victories over Rice and SMU.

Quarterback Deron Smith directs the Tulane attack. In the two victories, Smith's numbers have been hauntingly similar. Consider:

- Rice: 30 attempts, 19 completions, one interception, 221 yards, two touchdowns.

- SMU: 30 attempts, 18 completions, two interceptions, 223 yards, three touchdowns.

In his last two games, Smith has hit on more than 60 percent of his attempts, raising his season percentage to 55.4. He's also spread the ball around to six different receivers, each with at least four catches in those first three outings.

Leading the way on the receiving end is senior Melvin Ferdinand, a local product who didn't have a touchdown for the better part of the first four years of his career. But

Basic Briefing

The Series: Florida State leads it 7-0. Tulane has a win in the series (34-28 in 1983), but the Green Wave had to forfeit the game for using an ineligible player. FSU won last year's meeting in Tallahassee, 59-9.

The Coaches: Tulane's Greg Davis is in his third year with a career record of 11-15. Florida State's Bobby Bowden is in his 15th year at FSU (record of 124-40-3) and 25th year of college coaching, with a 197-72-3 mark, ranking him second among active Division I-A coaches in victories.

Injury Report: Tulane fullback Chance Miller should return this week after missing the SMU game with a "turf toe" injury, and center Tim Duncan is questionable after missing the last five weeks with a sprained knee. Tackle Barry Roscoe is out after injuring his knee against SMU.

Stat of the Week: Tulane's 43-7 victory last Saturday over SMU was the Green Wave's biggest margin of victory since a 48-7 shellacking of LSU in the 1981 season finale.

dating back to last year's LSU game, he has four TD catches in his last four games. Ferdinand leads the Wave with receptions (11) and yards (179).

On the ground, Tulane should again have a healthy Chance Miller this week. Miller rushed for 156 yards in Tulane's first two games, but missed the SMU contest with a "turf toe" injury.

That left the running slack to be picked up by Harold Dennis and Terrance Strickland. Both had career highs in rushing yardage against the Mustangs: Dennis with 91 yards on 15 carries, Strickland with 57 on 14 attempts.

Tulane will go up against a Florida State defense that allowed less than 200 yards and no touchdowns last week against Division I-AA powerhouse Georgia Southern.

Inside linebackers Kirk Carruthers, a preseason All-American candidate, and Marvin Jones, a true freshman who's already made some eye-catching plays, key the Seminole defense.

When Florida State has the ball:

Bobby Bowden-coached teams have traditionally had high-powered offenses, and the 1990 Seminoles are no exception.

FSU has shown more balance than in years past, averaging more than 215 yards per game rushing and 201 passing. The Seminoles gain 5.2 yards per rush and 6.1 yards per pass attempt.

Quarterback Brad Johnson, who replaced Peter Tom Willis as the Seminole signalcaller this year, has put up some huge numbers early on. Johnson has completed nearly 69 percent of his passes in FSU's two wins for 357 yards, four touchdowns and no interceptions.

A running game led by tailback Amp Lee has more than complemented the air attack. Lee has 149 yards and a pair of touchdowns through two games. He got a helping hand against Georgia Southern from true freshman Sean Jackson of New Orleans, who gained 112 yards.

Fullback Edgar Bennett is FSU's leading receiver, with 11 catches for 107 yards and two touchdowns. The deep threat is Lawrence Dawsey, the only returning member of the Seminole "Fab Four" receiving corps of a year ago.

FSU will go up against a Tulane defense that, like the Green Wave's balanced offense, pulled a first in the Davis era during the last two weeks. The Wave has held its last two opponents under 100 yards rushing.

Tulane has come up with its share of big plays, and the ones against SMU were by Florida natives. Lenzur Burton of Boca Raton had a pair of interceptions, and Darren McGowan of Merritt Island also had an interception and returned a fumble 17 yards for a touchdown.

Another Wave defender to watch is Jay Rink, who had two sacks against the Mustangs and has five tackles for losses in the first three games.

Special Teams:

Tulane has improved on special teams throughout the year. Gary Butler missed his first PAT try of the season, but has made eight straight since and added field goals of 41 and 43 yards against SMU. Chip Clark has averaged 37.5 yards on 10 punts since taking over those duties two weeks ago.

The key return man is Strickland, who's averaging nearly 23 yards per kickoff return and also runs back punts.

FSU's Richie Andrews has yet to miss a point after or field goal this year, while punter John Wimberly is averaging 37.6 yards per punt. Their key man on the Seminole special teams, however, is Terrell Buckley.

Buckley, a sophomore who doubles as one of FSU's starting cornerbacks, has returned two punts for touchdowns in the Noles' first two games, and is averaging 30.2 yards per return. He's also one of the deep men on kickoffs along with Shannon Baker.

Noteworthy:

Tulane has two former Florida State assistants on its staff. Bill Shaw coached at FSU from 1979-81, and John Devlin coached the Seminole defensive linemen, including Shaw, in 1971-72... There's several Floridians on the Tulane roster, but probably none with bigger ties than Darren McGowan, whose older sister, Linda Ann, played basketball for the Lady Seminoles... A Tulane win would give the Wave its first three-game winning streak since 1981... Like last week's game, tonight's affair is being televised. It's going back to Florida on the Sunshine Network.

University Salute

Tulane's University College: Tulane's University College provides access to the university for adult learners returning for part-time study, for international students, for the employed seeking to improve their skills through short courses and seminars, and for students in other special programs.

The degree-granting division was established in 1942 and named University College because its diverse programs cut across many academic fields of the university.

Current programs include: general studies, sports management, computer information systems, paralegal studies, business studies and degree programs in liberal arts and sciences for part-time students.

Almost 5,000 students enroll each year in University College. Dean is Lou Barrilleaux.

Wilson Center Dedicated

'Tickled to Death'—Wilson

Let's have a hullabaloo for Jim Wilson. Wilson earns Tulane's stored cheer for being the best friend and biggest benefactor of Green Wave athletics outside of Louisiana at least.

From Montgomery, Alabama, Wilson (Business '57) will be an honorary game captain when Tulane battles powerhouse Florida State at the Superdome tonight.

Earlier today the president and CEO of James W. Wilson & Associates, largest developers of shopping malls in the Southeast, will attend ceremonies dedicating the James W. Wilson, Jr. Center for Intercollegiate Athletics on the Tulane campus.

Wilson contributed $2.5 million of the $7.2 million building cost. The 76,000-square foot new athletic headquarters was completed and occupied at the end of August. The Hall of Fame in the three-story atrium was unveiled earlier today.

"I am tickled to death with the new building," said Wilson. "First I'm delighted that I am financially able to make a contribution. My wife (Wynona) and I believe in giving back something to whom we've been fortunate to receive.

"Then I like the design of the building. It is functional, has a look of permanency and is state of the art in being a first class athletic facility. I've been to Alabama and Auburn. This building is as good as any they've got.

Jim Wilson, a center in his playing days, now has a center named for him.

"Lastly, a building like this improves the atmosphere, helps build a positive attitude in the coaches and players and will be a tremendous recruiting tool in the future."

Wilson attended Tulane on a football scholarship, but after winning the starting center position and playing the first two games of 1953, he suffered a knee injury which ended his career. That is his only regret about his days at Tulane.

"I made some tremendous lifelong friends, got a superior education in business, enjoyed the good fellowship of belonging to SAE fraternity, prepared for military service by being a high-ranking ROTC officer, participated in campus basketball and softball, and I'm still crazy about the city of New Orleans," said Wilson.

A football teammate of Wilson's and roommate was star quarterback Gene Newton: "Jim played center and linebacker, and he played at 200 pounds, Newton said. "There's no telling how good he would have been if he hadn't gotten hurt. He went after football just as he has gone after business — full speed."

Wilson gives Newton a needle. "You know I really stepped down in class when I came to Tulane," Wilson said. "I went from snapping the ball to Bart Starr (Wilson's teammate at Lanier High School) to Newton."

Another Tulane teammate of Wilson was Austin Wilson, venerable sports editor of The Associated Press in New Orleans: "Jim was a good quick center. He wasn't as good as I, but he beat me out."

Another Tulane teammate was Max McGee, the future Green Bay Packer all-pro receiver. "Maxie was a wild man and some player," said Wilson.

Besides the memories and friends, Wilson credits football as playing an important role in his life.

"Football was a definite influence on my life," he said. "I learned a great deal from my high school and Tulane coaches. My position coach at Tulane was Jack Green. He was a great coach, a man's man and an inspiration to me.

"The discipline you learn in football goes forth with you in life whether it is married life, business life or raising the children. It teaches you that hard work pays off and makes you strive for accomplishments. What we learned in athletics drives us today."

Wilson's life today is full with work, play and family. His business includes 25 shopping malls in eight states, extensive residential and hotel properties, interests in banking, retail automotive accessories and historic restoration of commercial properties.

His office is in the renovated Montgomery Union Station. He lives on a 4,500-acre family farm and quail reserve. He is a hunter and avid fisherman. He has a beach home in Florida and a 54-foot yacht.

A deacon in the Presbyterian Church, Wilson has four children — Elizabeth Hunter, Jim Wilson III, Wynona Winston Reiley, Will Wilson — and four grandchildren.

Since Jim Wilson has deep roots in Alabama soil and he attended the University of Alabama for one year, what team will he root for when Alabama and Tulane collide in 1991? Without hesitation, he answered:

"Go Greenies!"

Tulane Needs to Excel In All Endeavors — Wilson

Jim Wilson, who belongs to the Paul Tulane Society as well as the Tulane Board for Intercollegiate Athletics, issued this challenge to the university:

"Private education in the United States has got a tremendous challenge in the '90s and thereafter. With the cost of education the way it is and funds not available from the state, Tulane has to excel in every department to be successful.

"The athletic department is a must. It must be competitive in all sports, not just football, in order that the university can move forward as an entity. Surveys show if Tulane drops Division I athletics, it would lose a tremendous amount of support from alumni. It can't afford this.

"If we can put competitive teams on the field, we are going to satisfy alumni. We need to compete and excel in all areas — scientists, mathematicians, lawyers and baseball pitchers."

IF YOU LEAVE, THIS HAPPENS.

No joke. If the state's best and brightest (that's you) leave after graduation, Louisiana can kiss tomorrow good-bye.

Times are tough enough without an increase in what's called the "brain drain." But it isn't just your brain we need. It's your energy, your dreams, your belief in the future.

On the other hand, we can't really expect you to stay if there aren't any jobs waiting for you when you graduate.

So the state's investor-owned electric companies are working on a wide array of economic development programs designed to create new jobs for Louisiana. These programs, for the most part, are directed at bringing in out-of-state employers, so they aren't very visible inside the state. But believe us, the programs are out there. And they have been since before you entered the first grade.

After all, we're the folks who least want to see the lights turned off in Louisiana!

Louisiana. Ready, willing, and very capable.

Investing in your energy future

Tulane University

Tulane enrolled over 11,500 students in its 11 schools and colleges in the fall of 1989. Undergraduate studies in liberal arts and sciences, architecture, engineering and business brought some 7,500 students to the university, with some 4,000 graduate students enrolling in law, business, social work, medicine, public health and tropical medicine, engineering, architecture, or liberal arts and sciences.

- Tulane is a member of the Association of American Universities, a group of 58 major American and Canadian research universities. It is one of only four AAU universities in the South.

- Our students provide an index of the university's quality. Average SAT scores, for example, have risen 77 points since 1980-81, reaching 1166 for the class entering in Fall, 1989. Relative to the national mean, the freshmen class is the strongest on record, with scores averaging a little more than 29 percent above the national norm. The typical freshman also ranks in the top third of his or her high school class.

- To ensure the continued presence of good students, Tulane's total financial aid budget has increased sixfold, from $5.5 million in 1980 to almost $40 million in 1989-90.

- Since 1981, six Rhodes scholars have been selected from Tulane. Only six other schools in the nation—Harvard, Princeton, Stanford, Yale, Georgetown and West Point—boast more Rhodes winners in that time.

- Newcomb students have received 35 Watson Fellowships since the program began in 1971—a national record. The fellowships provide $13,000 for a year of independent study abroad.

- Two Tulane seniors won Marshall Scholarships in 1989, awards which provide two years of study in Great Britain. Since 1981, Tulane has had five Marshall Scholars, ranking 8th in the nation.

- A higher percentage of Tulane's graduates—80 percent—plan to attend graduate or professional school at some point in their lives than do those from any other school in the nation, according to the September, 1989 issue of Money Magazine.

- Of those seeking jobs, about two in every three have had one in hand by graduation. Most begin over $20,000. Most popular places of employment, according to a survey of 1989 grads—New Orleans, New York, Houston and Washington, D.C. Most popular job categories and number hired are business/professional (39), manager (26), engineer (21), computer scientist (21), architect/artist (15).

- The university has about 73,000 living alumni. Almost one in three—23,000—reside in the Greater New Orleans area.

- A quarter-century after two women became the first black students to register at Tulane, the university boasted a 16 percent minority enrollment for the fall 1989 semester, including 7.7 percent African or African-American, 3.4 percent Asian, and 3.9 percent Hispanic.

- The faculty, which has 961 full-time members, includes a Nobel Prize-winning scientist and individuals who have earned fellowships from a wide variety of scholarly organizations. One of Tulane's faculty members was chosen as Louisiana's Professor of the year in 1989.

- Tulane is among the top 25 private universities in the amount of outside support for research each year, according to National Science Foundation statistics. The university is 12th among privates in amount of corporate research support and 27th in total federal support. Externally sponsored research has grown from $20 million in 1980 to more than $51 million in 1989. Tulane is also among the top 3 percent of American colleges and universities involved in 95 percent of the federally funded research in the United States.

- Many of our schools and departments rank high. Tulane Law School has been named one of five "up and coming" law schools in the nation, based on a survey of deans done by U.S. News and World Report and published in March, 1990. The market value of the university's endowment has grown from $74 million in 1981 to more than $221 million in 1989. In that same time span, the net worth of Tulane has gone from $202.9 million to $469 million. The university's operating budget is about $400 million a year, and it has assets of $642 million.

- In 1988-89, Tulane raised $30.4 million, the largest amount since the conclusion of the Campaign for Tulane in 1985. Planning is under way for a new five-year campaign, in conjunction with Tulane's strategic planning process. ■

Dr. Eamon Kelly University President

Eamon Michael Kelly was inaugurated president of Tulane University in 1981. Born in New York City, Kelly attended Fordham University. After receiving his doctorate in economics from Columbia University in 1965, he taught three years at Pennsylvania State University.

Joining the Johnson administration, he served as Director of Policy Formulation in the Economic Development Administration; and with the Small Business Administration, where he initiated the federal government's first minority economic development program.

While associated with the Ford Foundation from 1969 to 1970, Kelly was officer-in-charge of the Office of Social Development, the foundation's largest domestic and civil rights arm. Later appointed officer-in-charge of Program Related Investments, he managed a $50 million dollar national and international investment portfolio supporting foundation program initiatives. He also supervised development of the country's first domestic satellite system designed for public broadcasting.

As Special Advisor to the U.S. House of Representatives, Kelly drafted legislation providing $7 billion to prevent New York City's then imminent insolvency, and as special Counselor to the U.S. Secretary of Labor during the Carter years, he directed a government investigation of the Teamsters Pension Fund, negotiating transfer of the $1.7 billion fund to private management.

Kelly currently serves with several national educational policy organizations, such as the Association of American Universities, the Business Higher Education Forum, the Southern Education Foundation, and the Association of Governing Boards of Colleges and Universities, and has served with the American Council on Education and the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. He is also active on the boards of many professional, philanthropic, civic and corporate organizations, including the Committee for Economic Development, the National Captioning Institute, the Louisiana Land and Exploration Company, and the Hibernia National Bank. He has served as chairman of the Governor's Economic Development Commission of the State of Louisiana and the Gulf South District Committee for Selection of Rhodes Scholars, as well as on the boards of the Zapata Corporation and Louisiana Coca-Cola Bottling Company.

In 1983, Kelly received the Torch of Liberty Award from the New Orleans Chapter of the Anti-Defamation League, and in 1984, he received the first New Orleans CityBusiness "Spirit of Excellence" award. He was honored with the Order of St. Louis Medallion for the Archdiocese of New Orleans in 1986, and was awarded Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Palmes Academiques Award in 1990.

Kelly is married to the former Margaret Whalen, and they are parents of four sons, Martin (deceased), Paul, Andrew and Peter. ●

Chet Gladchuk

Director of Athletics

Chet Gladchuk makes things happen. Since becoming athletic director at Tulane on March 20, 1988, Gladchuk has unleashed a tidal wave of Green Wave activity. He has Tulane moving ahead on all fronts — development, facilities, coaching personnel, student life, conference affiliation, scheduling and university relations.

Gladchuk, 40, played football at Boston College, where he was a three-year letterman who captured postseason honors as a senior center.

Although football is in his blood, Gladchuk at Tulane first turned his attention to basketball. He initiated the reinstatement of a Division I men's basketball program after a five-year hiatus. He hired head coach Perry Clark. He oversaw the renovation of old Tulane Arena into sparkling new Fogelman Arena.

"Bringing back basketball has added another dimension of spirit and enthusiasm to our university community," Gladchuk said. "We are all very proud of the way basketball has re-emerged, and I am confident our coaches and student-athletes will bring Tulane much success in the very near future."

The renovation of Fogelman is one component of the $25 million Campaign for Tulane Athletics. Gladchuk has been an integral force in the capital fund-raising campaign, which recently surpassed $22 million. The 76,000-square foot James W. Wilson Jr. Center for Intercollegiate Athletics, heart of the athletic complex, opens this fall.

"The Wilson Center is one of the finest athletic facilities in the nation," said Gladchuk. "It is the kind of facility that sends a clear signal to prospective student-athletes that Tulane has made a substantial investment in our future as a Division I athletic program."

Other new athletic construction underway includes the Turchin baseball stadium, and renovations of the Goldring tennis complex and McWilliams track.

The arrival of Gladchuk at Tulane and the subsequent return to basketball led to reentry into the Metro Conference. He has upgraded football schedules and renegotiated a contract with LSU, ensuring continuation of the traditional rivalry.

Among college and community activities, Gladchuk was named president of the Louisiana Athletic Directors Association, is on the board of the College Football Foundation and the executive committee of the New Orleans Sports Foundation.

Gladchuk came to Tulane from Syracuse University, where he served as associate athletic director for four years. With Gladchuk as the institutional liaison, the Orange visited New Orleans to play in the 1987 NCAA Final Four and returned to the Superdome for the 1988 USF&G Sugar Bowl.

Gladchuk graduated in 1973 from Boston College cum laude with a degree in business administration. He received his master's degree in sports administration from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1974.

From 1974-78, Gladchuk was director of athletics and physical education and head football coach at New Hampton School in New Hampshire. From 1978-85, he was assistant athletic director and director of the physical education program at Massachusetts—Amherst.

Gladchuk was born May 30, 1950 in Amherst, Massachusetts. He is married to the former Kathy Blunt, who was captain of the cheerleading squad at Boston College. The Gladchuks have four children: John (15), Katie (13), Christy (8) and Julie (6). ■

Louisiana: the future is child's play.

"The future belongs to the children." You hear it every day. Yet when one of Louisiana's major educational systems was in danger of not opening its schools due to lack of insurance, no one came forward. No one except Pelican State Mutual Insurance Company. We relied on our instincts, experience, and intelligence so the children could depend on getting an education.

We understand the nature of Louisiana business—the business of schooling as well as everyday business—from traditional endeavors to extraordinary events such as Mardi Gras. Louisiana is on the move and so are we.

Pelican State Mutual Insurance Company's gross premiums have consistently doubled from previous year's figures. Since the first day of operation, our surplus has increased by 66%, and we've more than tripled our assets.

Pelican State Mutual Insurance Company. All the right moves.

Head Coach

A quarterback's dream coach — that's Greg Davis. The Tulane head coach played quarterback at McNeese State. Davis' son, Greg Jr., plays quarterback at Nicholls State. Three of Davis' pupils in his 12 years of college coaching are pro quarterbacks — Gary Kubiak of the Denver Broncos, Ken Karcher of the Kansas City Chiefs and Terrence Jones of the Calgary Stampeders.

Davis has a highly regarded fourth pro prospect in Tulane's 1990 starting quarterback Deron Smith.

Since coming to Tulane in 1985 as assistant head coach to Mack Brown, Davis has guided Green Wave offenses to 32 individual and 21 team records. The 1987 Tulane Independence Bowl team averaged 417 yards total offense per game as Jones and receiver Marc Zeno received all-America honors.

Davis succeeded Brown as head coach on Dec. 18, 1987. Despite ranking among the nation's leaders in total offense each year, the Green Wave posted records of 5-6 in 1988 and 4-8 in 1989. Two losses last year came on the final play.

Davis describes the Tulane offense as "multiple formations in movement to create advantages which can be exploited through execution."

Before coming to Tulane, Davis was quarterback coach at Texas A&M for seven years. He coached Kubiak, who led the Southwest Conference in passing and total offense in 1982. Says Kubiak of Davis: "I learned a tremendous amount about how to play quarterback and how to run an offense from Coach Davis. I've been in the NFL seven years and I find myself using the knowledge that I learned from him at Texas A&M. He's just an outstanding coach."

Karcher, who played for Tulane in 1985, gives another side of Davis. "Greg Davis is a coach who cares about the person and not just the player," he said.

Davis began his coaching career at Barbe High School in Lake Charles, La. in 1973-74 and moved to Port Neches-Groves High School in Port Neches, Texas in 1975-77.

Born in Port Arthur, Texas, on April 25, 1951, Gregory Lynn Davis attended Port Neches-Groves High School and lettered in football, basketball and baseball, winning all-district honors in all three sports.

At McNeese State, Davis lettered four years in football and was named all-conference as a senior. He also earned three letters as an infielder in baseball. He graduated in 1973 and received a master's degree in sports administration in 1977.

Davis and his wife, the former Patsy Metreyson, have two children — Greg Jr., 19, a redshirt freshmen quarterback at Nicholls State, and Stacey, 15, a junior cheerleader at Grace King High School. The Davises reside in Metarie.

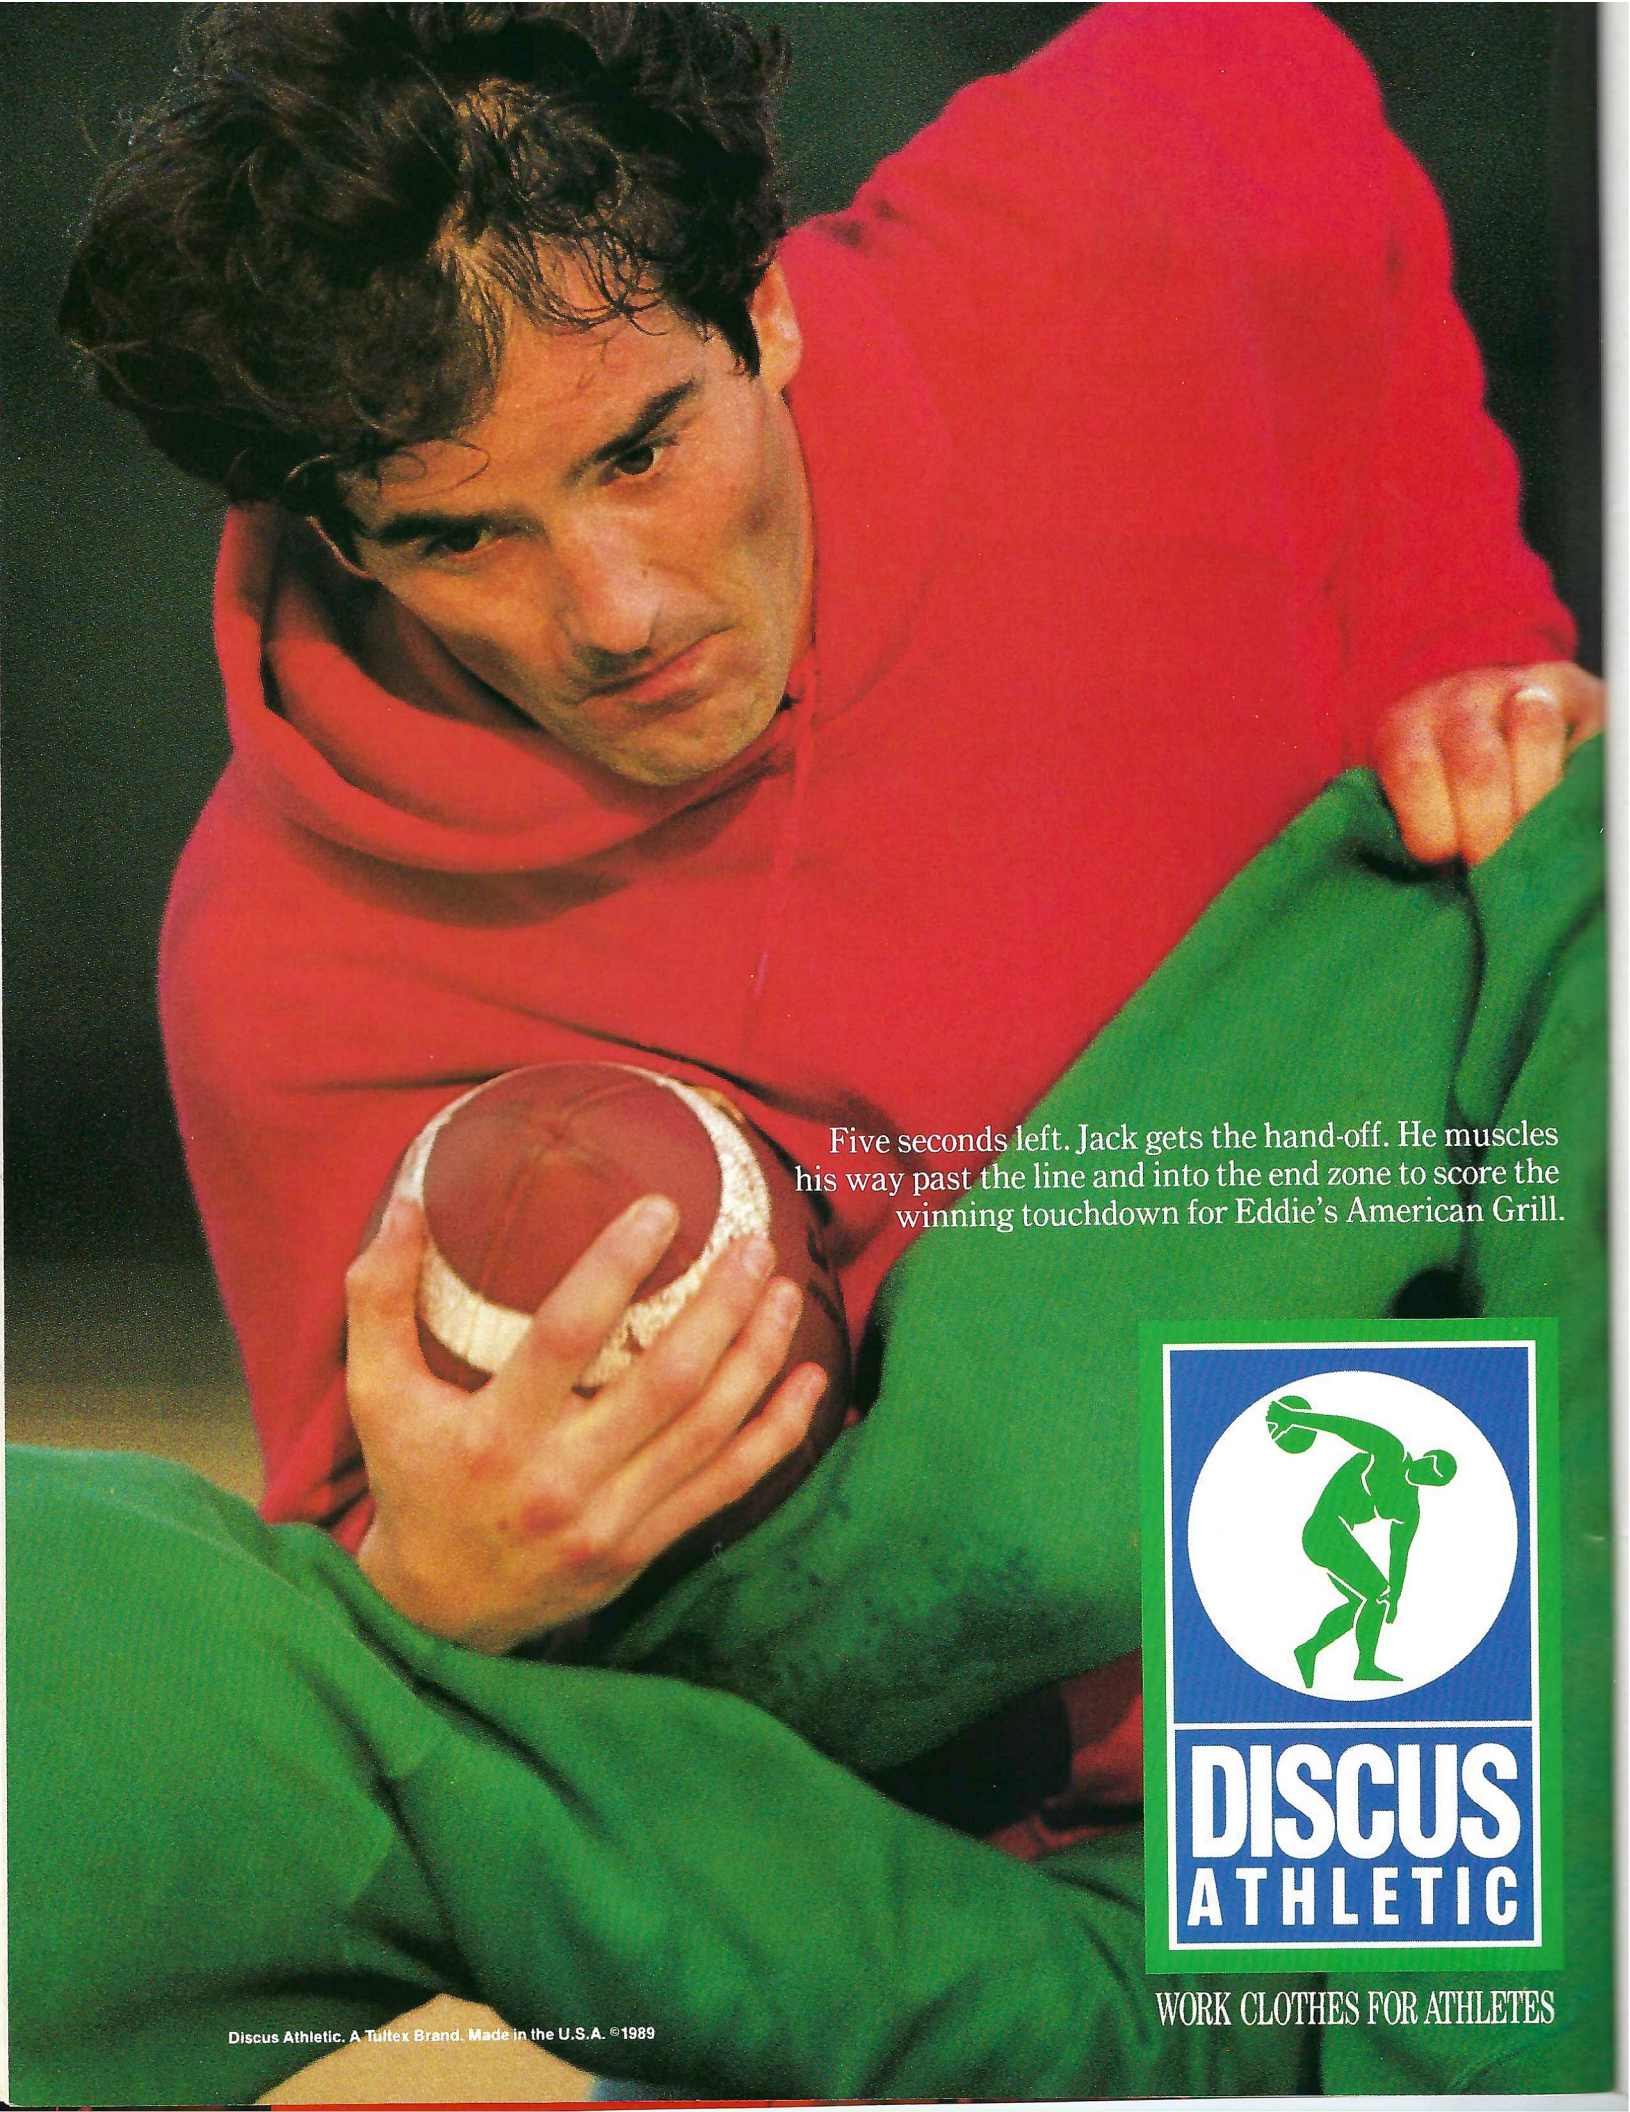

Davis is active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and a member of the prestigious NCAA Ethics Committee. He is a popular after-dinner and motivational speaker. His hobbies are golf and reading. His hero is Tom Landry. ●

TULANE TRIVIA

From 1893 to 1919, the athletic teams of Tulane were known as the Olive and Blue. In 1919, the Tulane Weekly, one of Tulane's many student newspapers at the time, began calling the football team the Greenbacks.

On Oct. 20, 1920, Earl Spalding, editor of the Tulane Hullabaloo, wrote a football song which was printed in the newspaper. The song was titled "The Rolling Green Wave." Although the name was not immediately adopted, it began to receive acceptance. On Nov. 19, 1920 a report of the Tulane-Mississippi A&M game in the Hullabaloo referred to the teams as the Green Wave.

By the end of the season, the Hullabaloo was using the term Green Wave to refer to all Tulane athletic teams, as were many daily papers.

TULANE TRIVIA

In its infancy, Tulane's mascot was depicted as a pelican riding on a surf board. The surfing pelican lasted for over 50 years.

The "Greenie" was adopted in 1955. It was created by John Chase, a local cartoonist who drew the covers of the Tulane football program and those of many teams throughout the South.

When Dr. Rix Yard became athletic director in 1963, he felt Tulane needed a more virile symbol for its teams. Working with Eldon Endacott, the manager of the Tulane bookstore, he arranged for a new mascot to be created. Several sketches were submitted by Art Evans, art director for Angelus-Pacific Co., in Fullerton, Calif.

The angry-looking Green Wave was adopted in 1964. The block "T" with waves has become accepted as the Tulane logo in the last few years.

Think of it as turbocharged TV.

Now high-performance can be experienced in a different kind of vehicle.

The new Toshiba 32-inch Super TUBE™ TV with Super Carver Sonic Holography®

The Super TUBE™ does for TV what turbocharging does for engines.

The power comes from increased voltage, via a dual path electron gun and eight larger lenses.

Perhaps, a few quotes from the February 1990 issue of Video Review will help put all this technology in its proper perspective.

When judged against seven other big screen TV's, the new 32-inch Super TUBE™ TV was unanimously voted as having "...the best picture...." As well as being "...more than 50% brighter than other sets..." with "...great focus, superb edge sharpness, and fine brightness..."

And it comes loaded with features, all standard of course, that make it easy to control and incredibly responsive.

Including remote-controlled swivel motors that allow the TV and two of its six speakers to each turn 15 degrees left or right.

Finally, there's a television for people who want high-performance in their living-room, as well as in their garage.

Palmolive® Softest Hands

A Six-Part Series Saluting College Football's Greatest Receivers

THE FIRST PAIR OF SOFT HANDS IN COLLEGE FOOTBALL

By Bert Randolph Sugar

The forward pass is one of football's most potent weapons. It is the tandem act of two men, the passer and the receiver, the one with the strong arm and the other with the soft hands. And yet, sad to relate, its origins are shrouded somewhere in the mists of time.

There are numerous stories that supposedly pinpoint the very first forward pass, each propped up with reverential anecdotes, cut up and restitched according to the preferences of the chronicler. But the one which has gained the greatest currency was found in one of those while-you-get-your-haircut weeklies that flourished during the last decade of the 19th century.

Interestingly enough, the passer's name has been lost to the ages. But the receiver, the player with the soft hands who made it all happen, is there for all to see.

The moment that changed the face of football occurred in a game played between the University of Georgia and the University of North Carolina, back on a fine southern afternoon in 1895. The game had been one of those classic push-me-pull-you bruising affairs, with each team testing the elasticity of the other—and failing mightily, as the 0-0 score indicated. With but five minutes remaining and the score still stalemated at zero, North Carolina was in possession of the ball on its own 40-yard line. As they had all afternoon, North Carolina called an end run.

And, as they had all afternoon, Georgia came up to do damage to the Carolina player with the ball.

As the Georgia tacklers trapped the Carolina runner behind the line, the North Carolina captain, George Butler, who had been leading the interference—such as it was—seeped through the wall of advancing Bulldogs. Standing four yards on the other side of the line of scrimmage, Butler hollered at the unknown Carolina ballcarrier, "Throw me the ball!"

Facing a sudden extinction of his lights, the more-than-somewhat confused ballcarrier, snatching at any straw, threw the ball in the general direction of Butler who caught it and, leaving the Georgia eleven as bereft of motion as a sail without wind, took off in full flight for the Georgia goal-line, 60 yards away.

The Georgia team stormed the referee, demanding that he call the play "illegal," since the rules, at the time, made no mention of anything even closely resembling a forward pass. But the official, as bewildered by the turn of events as everyone else, explained that he had not seen the pass. As far as he was concerned, the play and the touchdown stood.

Thus, 11 years before the forward pass was legalized by a rules change, the first forward pass was completed by an unnamed North Carolina back to a receiver possessed of soft hands named George Butler.

Q & A WITH DICK SCHULTZ

By JOHN BARTIMOLE

How many people can say they've got a job that only one person in the world has ever had before? Well, we know of at least one: Dick Schultz, the executive director of the NCAA. When he replaced the retiring Walter Byer, Schultz became only the second person in history to serve as the executive director of the NCAA.

Certainly, he brings to the office a management style quite unlike that of his predecessor. Also, it's obvious he came in with an agenda for change characterized by two overriding principles: streamline the NCAA and restore integrity to college athletics.

Touchdown Publications recently conducted an extensive interview with Schultz. Here's what he had to say about Prop 48, freshmen eligibility, a Division I football playoff, and a myriad of other subjects.

TD: Would the NCAA consider legislation which allows an academically under-qualified athlete to enter on scholarship (such as Prop 48 does now), but which causes an institution to forfeit that scholarship should that athlete flunk out? Similarly, do you support legislation that would cause colleges to lose a scholarship for each athlete who does not graduate in the five-year period?

"We have too many rules, too many parochial rules, which don't serve us well right now."

A free-lance writer living in Olean, N.Y., JOHN BARTIMOLE writes for the Big East Conference, the NCAA and numerous sports publications.

The executive director of the NCAA sounds off on a variety of timely subjects.

Q & A WITH DICK SCHULTZ

Dick Schultz: On both instances, I'm not certain, but I don't think so. I'd rather see the colleges concentrate on recruiting qualified athletes, and agree to not recruit a non-qualifier. In fact, there seems to be a movement in that direction now.

Such a proposal would work this way: a non-qualifying athlete would not be allowed to sign early, but would be able to sign with a college in the last five days of the later signing period—if a coach wanted to take a chance on the athlete. If the athlete is a non-qualifier, he would be awarded financial aid on a need basis, not through an athletic scholarship.

TD: Much has been written about the fairness, too, of Prop 48. Do you think the NCAA should "reward" a Prop 48 athlete who succeeds academically by granting an extra (fourth) year of eligibility to him/her, thus giving the athlete five years in college? (As it stands now, the athlete has only three years of eligibility, losing his or her first year.) Why? If not, what changes would you like to see in that legislation?

D.S.: That suggestion certainly has merit to it. Bobby Knight once proposed something comparable, and I've asked him to resurrect it. Other options are being considered. One, very basically, pegs the number of new scholarships available on the number of athletes who graduate. Of course, the actual legislation would be more complex than that.

TD: Freshmen eligibility is another hot topic. What is your view on the ramifications of freshmen eligibility? Do you see it remaining an NCAA reality, or is sentiment growing against it?

D.S.: There used to be a movement against freshmen eligibility, but that's beginning to wane now. The claim was that freshmen ineligibility would be the cure for all our problems, and now, people are realizing that's simply not the case. In fact, there's no evidence that suggests freshmen eligibility is an academic detriment.

In support of freshmen eligibility is the fact that there are a lot of student-athletes who do quite well. At best, a rule barring freshmen from competing on an intercollegiate basis would be discriminatory; freshmen, for example, are not barred from working on the campus newspaper. For all those reasons, I think the move to make freshmen ineligible has lost its momentum.

TD: Talk is growing much more vocal of a playoff to crown a Division I football champion. What are the obstacles, from your perspective, to such an event? What are the advantages?

D.S.: We're a few years away from this, and some topics have to be addressed before a college football championship —on the field—will become a reality. But if legislation is passed which deals effectively with the time demands imposed on football players, that will be one obstacle cleared.

Also a factor in this picture is the NFL. NFL expansion will cause more playoff games, which will affect college bowl games. Then, the idea of a playoff will probably become a reality.

TD: The NCAA will consider legislation which will strengthen the requirements necessary for a member institution to be classified as Division I. What is the basis for this, and do you think the proposal is a sound idea?

D.S.: This is to ensure that those institutions in Division I are running bona fide Division I programs, not merely having

"Though we've had a low incidence of positive results in our drug testing program, I sometimes think we're catching only the dumb ones."

one or two Division I sports and playing at much lower levels in the other sports, or in women's sports. Undoubtedly, this issue will be hotly contested, but I think it's essential. It will make Division I better for everybody.

TD: The NCAA has received much comment on its drug-testing program in championship events and bowl games. Are there any changes pending in the program? And what is your reaction to the low incidence of positive tests?

D.S.: There's a big change coming in our drug-testing program, and that is the advent of mandatory year-round drug testing in football. We'll do that with other sports, too, but we'll begin with football.

This is designed to eliminate any athletes who may, for instance, be cycling anabolic steroids with water-based steroids. Under the current system, anyone who knows far enough in advance when a drug test is to occur can make certain traces of steroids are cleared from his or her system. Though we've had a low incidence of positive results in our drug-testing program, I sometimes think we're catching only the dumb ones. The ongoing, mandatory testing should help us to eliminate this and any abuse of anabolic steroids.

TD: College sports popularity continues to skyrocket. Do you expect to see that trend to continue, or is a zenith coming soon?

D.S.: Some sports will grow, such as soccer, baseball and women's basketball. Men's basketball continues to enjoy growing popularity, but it appears that the interest in football has leveled off.

TD: What do you wish people would know about the NCAA that they don't realize right now?

D.S.: People don't realize that 1,020 members comprise the NCAA. Also, they don't realize that we—the administrators of the NCAA—don't make any rules, but we merely enforce the rules set by our members. We're not just a bureaucratic group in Kansas that puts colleges on probation. We're a collection of more than 1,000 member institutions who collectively make and support legislation designed to improve college athletics.

TD: Similarly, if you had the authority to change one single aspect of the NCAA, what would it be—and why?

D.S.: What needs to be changed? A number of things, especially those which impact on the integrity of college athletics. We have too many rules, too many parochial rules, which don't serve us well right now. I'd like to see more done by the athletic conferences. And, as I said before, we need to do some restructuring and develop a new model of what the NCAA will be in the future. I see major changes ahead. What those changes will be are somewhat unclear now, but you'll see changes.

TD: What one aspect of your job has surprised you the most?

D.S.: The thing I wasn't quite prepared for was the tremendous time demand. Walter (Byer, former executive director of the NCAA) travelled very little. The executive committee made it very clear to me that they wanted the person who replaced Walter to travel more, to go out to visit more member institutions. I've done that, but it's been very demanding, and now I'm trying to get it a bit under control.

TD: At the end of your term, what would you like people to say about you and your impact on the NCAA?

D.S.: I'd like them to say this: He restored integrity in intercollegiate athletics. That would be perfect. ■

You don't have to fly a lot to fly free.

With TWA's Frequent Flight Bonus Program, free travel award levels are among the lowest in the industry.

You can earn a free roundtrip ticket within the continental U.S. after just 20,000 miles, or to Europe starting at just 35,000.

We'll even give you a 3,000-mile bonus—as well as a free one-class upgrade—just for joining the program, provided you fly with us within three months of your enrollment.

And unlike most programs, with TWA your mileage credits never expire.

Business Class for the price of Coach.

Of course, with TWA, free travel isn't your only benefit. After flying just 5,000 miles in a 12-month period, you can also earn unlimited free upgrades to Business Class on domestic flights with the purchase of qualifying tickets. You don't even cash in any of your mileage credits to receive them.

Low award levels. No mileage expiration. Free upgrades. If these are the things you want in a frequent flyer program, call TWA at 1-800-221-2000 and join the one program that has them all.

Today's TWA.

Find out how good we really are.®

NEW WIZARD SOFTWARE LETS YOU DO MORE THAN IS HUMANLY POSSIBLE.

The Wizard electronic organizer from Sharp never forgets a name. Never misses a date. And makes short work of jobs that it's only human to postpone.

And with a growing library of optional software cards, it handles tasks most people find difficult or impossible.

The Wizard can tell you where to stay in cities you've never visited. It can track your expenses, translate eight languages, and help you manage your money. It can even play games.

There's a PC Link to keep your Wizard in constant touch with IBM® PC-compatible or Macintosh® personal computers.

Yet despite all this power, it's humanly possible to master Wizard software quickly. Because these new programs are as easy to use as The Wizard itself.

Flashback: Ronnie Quillian

By Gayle Letulle

The bull-like rushes and booming punts of fullback Ronnie Quillian helped Tulane to a couple of winning seasons in the mid-1950s.

The Green Wave's leading rusher in 1955 and 1956, Quillian also played opportunistic defense and got off some prodigious quick kicks as he helped Coach Andy Pilney's two best teams to 5-4-1 and 6-4 records.

Quillian saw limited action in three varsity games as a freshman, highlighted by a 10-yard TD run against Ole Miss. As Tulane's number two fullback in 1954, he scored a TD in a 14-13 loss to LSU and got off a 65-yard quick kick in a 7-7 tie with North Carolina.

He took over as Tulane's starting fullback in 1955 and earned All SEC honors as he finished second in the conference in rushing with 685 yards and second in punting with a 39.2 yard average.

Quillian scored 10 touchdowns in 1955, highlighted by two TD performances in wins over VMI, Northwestern and Alabama. In that 27-7 win over the Crimson Tide, he rushed for 107 yards and got off a 72 yard punt. In the finale with LSU, he crossed the Tiger goal line for the second straight year as the archrivals played to a 13-13 tie.

As a senior in 1956, he led the Wave to a 6-4 finish. Named the team's MVP, he led the team in rushing for the second straight year and scored TDs in six games. Against Mississippi State, he gained 141 yards on 26 carries and scored the game winning TD in the final two minutes.

Quillian capped his college career with a strong performance against LSU, scoring for the third straight season and booming a 63 yard punt in a 7-6 loss.

Ronnie Quillian scored 10 touchdowns and earned All-SEC honors in 1955.

The Hall of Fame Reception Room, adjacent to the new Tulane Hall of Fame in the Wilson Center, includes portraits of each of the Green Wave's first-team All-Americans.

Keep A Great Thing Growing America, Tree City USA

TREE CITY USA

City foresters plant, prune, and care for trees in parks and along streets. Your town's community forestry program deserves your concern and your strong support.

You can help make your town a Tree City USA, make your neighborhood more beautiful, and make your home more valuable when you prune and care for your own trees.

A free, easy-to-follow "How To Prune" guide has been prepared by The National Arbor Day Foundation to show you how.

This valuable booklet is filled with illustrations showing you how to make a pruning cut . . . how to prune for desired form . . . how to strengthen your tree by removing certain branches . . . how to select and care for pruning tools . . . how to prune according to the tree's function.

Keep a great thing growing. Write for your free booklet today. Send your name and address to: How To Prune, National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

The competition is tough . . . quarterback positions aren't given, they are earned. You know what has to be done . . . and you're willing to do it. All that effort and hard work . . . yeh, it will be worth it.

Winners aren't born . . . they're made. It takes many years of hard work, dedication and commitment to achieve excellence.

Tonight's Opponent: Florida State

Florida State University is a public, coeducational university and a senior member of the State University System, founded as an institution of higher learning in 1851 by legislative act. It began operating in Tallahassee with its first students in 1857.

The main campus is spread over 347 acres in Tallahassee, but the University owns a total of 1,167 acres in three countries.

The FSU faculty includes 1,549 members. It is backed for 2,786 administrative, professional and support staff.

FSU places a high priority on its more than 28,000 students, their needs and interests. The one-of-a-kind, all-collegiate Flying High Circus, the Honors and Scholars Program, student government and intramural sports are among more than 200 organizations and activities in which students can participate.

The Engineering Building houses both the Florida State and Florida A&M Colleges of Engineering.

Linebacker Kirk Carruthers is one of the best at his position in the country.

Tennis anyone?

Second-year Tulane head coach Jennifer Tuero would readily accept an offer from anyone.

The New Orleans native is no stranger to Green Wave tennis. Tuero is a 1979 graduate of Newcomb College, and captained the varsity women's squad during her senior year.

Tuero is in charge of a women's program that was 11-10 and finished fourth at the Metro Championships. Tuero says that last year's record was not indicative of the Lady Wave's strength.

"We had some 5-4 losses that could have gone our way," Tuero said. "We lost those matches due to illness or injury to our top six players. The talent was better than the record shows. The women will be very strong this year."

This year's edition of Tulane women's tennis looks more than strong enough to better the 11-10 record, but topping that mark will depend on the play of four incoming freshmen. Tuero believes that many of the newcomers could take the number one position.

Incoming freshman include Dina Berger of Plantation, Fla; Vanessa Brill of Columbia, S.C.; Ashley Stowe of Baton Rouge, and Joy deCarvalho of Bronxville, N.Y.

Tuero is proud of her recruits. "All of them are strong singles players, but more importantly they are talented doubles players," Tuero said. "All four could crack the top six. These girls possess the attitude that can make Tulane tennis one of the strongest in Louisiana and a force to contend with in the Metro Conference."

Newcomer Berger has good bloodlines for tennis. Her brother Jay Berger is ranked among the top 10 in the world and recently defeated U.S. Open champion Pete Sampras.

Returnees include 1990 MVP Claudia Hugill, last year's No. 3 Michele Mendell, Aye Unnoppet and Rikki Spinner.

"All these girls have experience, but they will be challenged by the freshmen," Tuero said. "We've got eight scholarship players vying for six positions. That shows a lot of depth that we didn't have last year."

"To think that two of the girls will not make the top six says a lot for our program," Tuero added. "The teams that beat us 5-4 last year are in for a surprise."

The physical play of this year should be stronger as well. "They are all good, strong girls with diverse games," Tuero said. "Some play more on the baseline, while others are more aggressive. That will help us to mix up our doubles attack. Last year, our doubles game was a weakness — this year, it will be a key strength."

With the ladies playing home matches at the new Goldring Complex, the schedule has additions to the schedule to better reflect participation in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches' Association Southwest Regional. Wave foes will include Rice, Texas Tech, as well as Metro rivals Louisville and Florida State.

"This is a tough schedule, but it's a good one," Tuero said, "These girls are ready for the challenge."

The women have impressive goals this year. "Besides having a better record than last year," Tuero said, "We would like to crack the top three in the Metro Conference. I don't think that is a bad goal considering the strength of the teams at the top."

For the men, Tuero points to a year of rebuilding. "We have six scholarship freshman who should be competitive. Neil Simon (a 6-1 freshman from Amherst, N.Y.) looks to be strong, as well as some of our other freshman."

"It's going to be a fun year. The men come in knowing as a group that we need to turn things around," Tuero said.

Other freshmen to look for on the men's squad are Jonas Kushner from Ft. Myers, Fla.; Jason Lichterman from Cherry Hill, N.J. and Ken Shapiro from Sarasota, Fla.

Both the men's and women's teams opened their fall seasons this weekend in the Beach Club Invitational in Metairie.

To be fair, most minivans do exactly what they're designed to do: haul cargo from one place to another.

Which probably makes comparisons with the Oldsmobile® Silhouette rather unfair. Because, as you can clearly see, the Silhouette® is designed and engineered with more than cargo space in mind.

Quite a bit more, in fact.

With its advanced design, sophisticated technology and remarkable luxury, it has the capacity to do something you never dreamed a multipurpose passenger vehicle could actually do.

Namely, excite and intrigue you.

For starters, Silhouette comes standard with seven individual contoured bucket seats, instead of the usual bench seats. Which means you won't ever feel like you're sitting inside a bus.

It also comes with a lot of other standard features, including a 3.1-liter V6 engine, air conditioning, an AM/FM stereo system, full driver instrumentation, and one of the most advanced solar coated windshields in the world.

Of course, Silhouette's technology also extends into the realm of versatility. Any or all of the five rear seats can be removed easily by one person to create up to 112.6 cubic feet of cargo space.

And in addition to the innovative features we put into the Silhouette, we also put another one on top of it. It's called the Oldsmobile Edge™. A comprehensive customer satisfaction plan designed to make Oldsmobile the industry leader in total owner satisfaction.

To find out more about it, or about the Silhouette, visit your nearest Oldsmobile dealer today. Or, if you prefer, simply call toll-free, 1-800-242-OLDS, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.-7 p.m. EST.

THE RISE OF THE CONFERENCES

Most colleges have found that competition within a league helps their athletic program, especially in football.

BY BILL SHANNON

Some colleges—certainly Notre Dame, Miami and Penn State—have developed a national reputation for competitive inter-collegiate programs outside the organizational structure of any league or conference, except for the overview of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

But most institutions of higher learning have found that competition within some league framework is a positive force for their athletic program, particularly when it comes to football.

Of the currently functioning major conferences, the Big Ten can lay claim to being the oldest permanent grid game around. It was organized on Feb. 8, 1896, with seven Midwestern members—Illinois, Wisconsin, Purdue, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern and the University of Chicago.

Long before that, several major Eastern colleges (notably Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Columbia) had been playing each other in an informal round robin annually. For these schools, though, formal organization was more than a half-century away.

In 1899 Indiana and Iowa were admitted to what was rapidly becoming the Big Ten of today. Michigan withdrew in 1908 and

THE RISE OF THE CONFERENCES

THE IVY LEAGUE

On Dec. 8, 1914, the Southwest Athletic Conference was formed, and crowned its first football champion the following season. It had been preceded in organization by the Missouri Valley Conference, which was formed under the guidance of Prof. Clark W. Hetherington of the University of Missouri in 1907. One of the organizers of the conference was James Naismith, the inventor of basketball, who represented the University of Kansas.

Five colleges (Missouri, Iowa State, Kansas, Kansas State and Oklahoma) withdrew from the Missouri Valley in 1928 and formed a separate organization, now known as the Big Eight.

West Coast colleges were not idle, either. The original Pacific Coast Conference was formed Dec. 2, 1915, in Portland, Ore. The founding colleges were California, Oregon, Oregon State and Washington.

Over the ensuing decades this conference went through several periods of expansion and contraction, with members joining from as far away as Montana. Eventually the conference was abandoned and replaced by the Pac-8, which became the present Pac-10 with the admission of Arizona and Arizona State in 1978.

Meanwhile, the Eastern schools continued to function as independents in football (as many of them do today), although they formed conferences for other sports.

Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia and Pennsylvania were major football powers when they formed the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League in 1901, but they did not form a football conference.

It wasn't until 1956 that the Ivy League—which was comprised of these schools—was formed, bringing together many of the colleges that had created intercollegiate football in the 1870s.

Conferences today provide many services to their constituent colleges, including medical, academic and admissions information. Conferences offer revenue sharing programs, so that each school they represent receives part of the revenue earned through bowl games and tournaments. They also provide a forum for the exchange of data, which is beneficial to both the schools and the student-athletes.

But for followers of college football, the conferences create standings in the Sunday newspapers, too. ■

Ohio State joined in 1912. When Michigan returned in 1917, the "Western Conference" finally reached its complement of 10 members. It was to remain unchanged until Chicago dropped intercollegiate athletics in 1946 and withdrew.

On May 20, 1949, Michigan State became the 10th member and the Big Ten Intercollegiate Conference, as it has since been known, was intact.

By 1922 the Big Ten had developed to the point at which it was necessary to appoint the first conference commissioner, Maj. John L. Griffith. He held the post continuously until his death in 1944, when he was succeeded by Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson.

By the time Maj. Griffith took office, the Big Ten had spawned the first of its many imitators. The Southern Conference was formed on Feb. 26, 1921, in Atlanta, when almost every major intercollegiate athletic program in the South joined the organization.

Initially, 22 schools belonged to the Southern Conference. The number increased to 23 in 1927 when Duke joined.

Having later spawned two very healthy offspring, the Southern Conference can perhaps be called "the father of conferences." Although none of its charter members remain in membership today, the Southern Conference is still alive and prospering.

But in 1932 the Southern Conference fathered the Southeastern Conference, when the original group split along geographical lines (more or less), with 13 schools forming the new organization. The University of the South dropped out of the Southeastern Conference in 1940.

Twenty years later another major split occurred, when seven Southern Conference members withdrew and joined with the University of Virginia to form the present Atlantic Coast Conference in 1952.

What many other car repair guarantees cover after 90 days.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee lasts for as long as you own your Ford, Lincoln or Mercury. That's Peace of Mind.SM

Most car repair guarantees last for only 90 days or 4,000 miles. Ours lasts a lifetime.

A lifetime means you only pay for a covered repair once. If it ever needs to be fixed again, just hand a copy of the bill to your dealer. He'll fix it free. Free parts. Free labor. For as long as you own your vehicle.

A lifetime means it doesn't matter how many miles you drive. Or if your car is new or used. And that means LSG covers more parts and labor longer than anyone else. Which makes it America's best car repair guarantee.

Ask a participating Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer for LSG. Because Peace of Mind is having a guarantee that won't disappear.

QUALITY CARE FOR QUALITY CARSSM

A good leather coat should have two arms and fifty feet.

In this world, there are many things that can be mass-produced.

But not a coat like this.

Not a coat that requires over fifty feet of the finest calfskin available anywhere on earth. Calfskin so perfect it can be tanned as is with vegetable oils.

Never painted or color corrected.

Not a coat whose every square inch has undergone the most expensive, most effective waterproofing known to man. A process in which we flood the leather with a special waterproof compound while it is being tanned in the drum, not afterwards.

This is the only technique that insures total penetration of the waterproofing agent. The only technique good enough for a garment that bears our name.

Not a coat whose comfort seems to increase the more you put it under the stress of active use. Because of the extra feet of calfskin, the extra hours of tailoring we spend opening up the back and shoulder dimensions. Adding features such as two-piece underarm gussets to maximize your freedom of movement.

And certainly not a coat whose detailing is so meticulous that every zipper is milled and tumbled smooth so as to not injure the leather, every button is genuine horn or brass, and every button-hole is both calfskin bound and cleaned with stitching inside and out.

In leather coats that lack this latter feature, shreds of lining will begin to emerge in a matter of months. But Timberland designers do not think in terms of months. They take a longer view of product longevity. Setting their sights on a decade or two. Or more.

There is a method to our madness, and it is perfectly clear. We will do anything for the extra comfort and confidence of our customers.

Confidence, for example, that getting caught in a sudden downpour won't spoil your day or your valuable calfskin investment. Confidence that on the night your buddy spills a beer on your sleeve, you'll need to do nothing more than find a little water and a sponge.

The way we see it, consumer confidence is as hard to come by, in this age of shoddy products, as the world's highest quality calfskin.

Like our leather coats and jackets, it can't be mass-produced.

Boots, shoes, clothing, wind, water, earth and sky.

TOUCHDOWNS

& TAILGATES

Mr. Tailgate

He strides purposefully up to his fully-loaded station wagon like a crafty quarterback stalking up to the line of scrimmage before taking the snap. He has the same intense look in his eye, carefully surveying the situation, taking all variables into account before setting things in motion. Then after driving to the stadium and arriving hours before kickoff, he drives around for several minutes before he selects the perfect parking space, the ideal location for his celebration of sport and socializing.

Dressed in casual, loose-fitting clothes, wearing a hat to shade his eyes and a high-powered sunscreen lotion to block the sun, he is ready for action. First out of the car is the team banner, proudly proclaiming his loyalty to good old Whatsdamatta U. Then after recruiting his wife and three kids and several innocent passers-by, he begins assembling his camp. His fortress of solitude. His tailgate party.

Meet Mr. Tailgate.

This is the tailgater who has it all, from a huge car large enough to haul supplies for the Eighth Infantry of the U.S. Army to a nearly limitless supply of Ziploc storage bags. Mr. Tailgate and his tailgating family are legends, true pioneers. They put the "party" in "tailgate party."

Mr. Tailgate knows his craft. Ask him how to change a flat tire and he'll meet you with the blankest of blank stares. But ask him about the best way to bake potatoes on the barbecue grill and his eyes light up like a hungry animal who has just sighted his prey. He'll talk for hours about the burning debate over steak vs. hamburgers.

No one knows where he originally came from, what school he went to, whether he was born on this planet. He appears every September at the first home game and then disappears sometime in late November, although occasional sightings have been reported at bowl games and Independence Day picnics. Where he goes and what he does when the season ends, nobody knows. Or wants to know.

But that's OK, because when the season is on, when the leaves are turning color and footballs are filling the air, people turn to Mr. Tailgate and beg for his help. "Please, give me your recipe for German potato salad." or "Do you have to refrigerate an opened jar of pickles?" or "What's the square root of 36,561?" Suddenly he is elevated to the level of high adviser, the answer man, the guru of the tailgate. On Sundays, he rests at home and watches pro football, but on Saturdays, he is king.

The funny thing is, Mr. Tailgate isn't a big football fan. He doesn't talk much about two-point conversions and blocked punts. He prefers discussing checkered tablecloths and cloth napkins. Because once the game starts he's no longer the expert. The coaches don't turn to him for advice and neither do the players.

But after the final gun sounds, he'll return to his lounge chair throne.

F OOTBALL H ERO

1/3 cup prepared Italian dressing
3 tablespoons French's Yellow Mustard
2 teaspoons Durkee RedHot Cayenne Pepper Sauce

1 large loaf Italian bread (about 15 inches long)
1 1/2 pounds assorted sliced cold cuts (turkey, ham, salami)
Lettuce and sliced tomatoes

In measuring cup combine dressing, mustard and RedHot sauce; whisk until smooth. Cut bread in half lengthwise; remove excess bread. Drizzle mustard mixture over both halves of bread. Arrange cold cuts, lettuce and tomatoes on bread. Close halves. Wrap in heavy duty aluminum foil. Refrigerate. Cut into slices.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

C REAMY BROCCOLI C H E E S E S O U P

2 packages (1 ounce each) white sauce mix
2 cups milk
1 cup water
1 cup (4 ounces) processed American cheese, cubed

2 tablespoons French's Yellow Mustard
1/4 teaspoon granulated chicken bouillon
3 cups broccoli florets, cut in bite-size pieces

In medium saucepan, prepare white sauce mix according to package directions using milk and water; cook until slightly thickened. Add cheese, mustard and bouillon; stir until cheese melts. Add broccoli, simmer uncovered, until broccoli is tender, 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Makes 4 servings.

PARTY TIPS

- Wrap cheese sandwiches and heros in double thickness heavy duty foil. Place on hot grill to heat and melt cheese.
- To prevent breakage: Wrap pottery and glasses with dish towels. Use pot holders to cushion glassware when packing.

C RISPY TANGY C H I C K E N W I N G S

1/4 cup each French's Yellow Mustard and melted butter
2 tablespoons Durkee RedHot Cayenne Pepper Sauce

2 1/2 pounds chicken wings; whole or split
1 cup cornflake crumbs

In large bowl combine mustard, butter and RedHot sauce. Add wings, toss to coat evenly. Dip wings into cornflake crumbs. Place on rack in roasting pan. Bake at 425°F for 40 to 45 minutes or until done, turning occasionally. Serve hot or cold.

Makes 8 servings.

Ben Weiner Foundation

Ben Weiner

The Ben Weiner Foundation was founded in 1977 through a generous donation from Tulane's lifelong supporter, Ben Weiner.

In order to ensure the future vitality of the program, he established an endowment to fund the education of Tulane student-athletes. Thanks to his leadership, Tulane has been able to offer educational opportunities to many student-athletes.

The $10 million campaign goal for enriching the Ben Weiner Foundation is clearly the best way to provide stable funds for the strong athletic program being developed at Tulane. •

Sports Medicine

Treating the Athlete as an Athlete

If you're a dedicated athlete—professional, varsity or amateur—even a minor residual weakness or restriction from an injury is a threat to your ultimate potential.

The sports medicine staff at Tulane University Medical Center understands that concern. We draw upon the latest techniques, from arthroscopic surgery to physical rehabilitation, in our efforts to return you to full capability.

We hope you never need us. But if you do, be assured that we will treat you as an athlete as well as a patient.

WIN A SEAT TO THE COLLEGE BOWL GAME OF YOUR CHOICE AND GET THIS CUSHION FREE.

When we designed a hotel dedicated to the needs of business people, we attracted a lot of fans. Now, with the Courtyard College Bowl Sweepstakes, we expect to attract even more.

One reason is our Grand Prize: an expense-paid trip for two to the college bowl game of your choice and $10,000 in cash. Another reason is our First Prize: an expense-paid trip for two (13 winners) to any bowl game. The third reason: we're giving away more than 1,000 other great prizes.

So visit a Courtyard soon and enter our College Bowl Sweepstakes. Even if you don't win, you'll have discovered a hotel where you can't lose.

No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Must be 18 or older to enter. For official rules, visit a Courtyard hotel. All entries must be received by November 23, 1990.

Athletic Staff

TOM PETERS
Associate Athletic Director

Tom Peters, an 18-year veteran of college and professional athletics, begins his third year on the Tulane staff as associate athletic director.

Peters' responsibilities extend from the day-to-day operations of the athletic department to the broad range of NCAA rules and regulations. He also manages the business office, oversees game operations and facilities, supervises marketing and ticket sales, handles eligibility and compliance and makes schedules for non-revenue sports.

A three-year hockey letterman at the University of Massachusetts, Peters came to Tulane in August, 1988 after seven years as assistant athletic director at Rutgers University. Among his duties at Rutgers, Peters supervised departmental operations which included all marketing and media relations. He served as tournament manager for the NCAA East Regional basketball tournament from 1986-88.

A native of Arlington, Mass., Peters received his bachelor's degree in business administration from Massachusetts in 1971 and a master's in sports management from the same school in 1973.

Peters worked in the Boston area for nine years, at the famed Boston Garden and for the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League. The last five of those years were as sales and marketing manager. Prior to that, Peters was an administrative assistant at the University of Virginia.

Peters is married to the former Michelle Nichols and they have two daughters, Nicole (13) and Erica (10). They reside in Kenner.

PHIL HUGHES
Assistant Athletic Director/Student Life

Phil Hughes, a four-year member of the athletic staff, handles the student life program for the Tulane athletic department as assistant athletic director.

Hughes came to Tulane in February, 1987 after five years in various academic counseling roles at the University of Kentucky.

Hughes' final three years at UK were spent in the position of academic athletic counselor.

Hughes is a 1980 graduate of the University of California-San Diego. He earned his master's degree in counseling psychology from Kentucky in December, 1983.

Hughes and his wife, Betty, have an infant son, Stafford.

M.L. LAGARDE
Assistant Athletic Director/Facilities and Special Events

M.L. Lagarde, who has been a part of the Tulane family in a number of capacities over the past four decades, is in his 17th year on the Tulane staff, now serving as assistant athletic director for facilities.

Lagarde, who graduated from Tulane in 1952, covered the athletic program for the Times-Picayune in New Orleans before joining the Green Wave staff in 1974 as sports information director. He was SID for 10 years.

While in school, Lagarde lettered in tennis, was a member of the Junior Davis Cup Team and was nationally ranked.

After a career as a successful high school coach, Lagarde covered local high school sports during his 10-year stay at the Times-Picayune.

JERRY WYNN
Assistant Athletic Director/Communications

Jerry Wynn, a veteran of sports writing and public relations, is starting his second year as assistant athletic director for communications at Tulane.

Wynn spent 16 years as a public relations director in the National Football League, first with the San Diego Chargers and then with the New Orleans Saints.

He also has experience in newspapers with the Long Beach Press Telegram, in television as a media specialist for CBS Sports and in magazines as a freelance writer.

Since 1981, Wynn was head of his own public relations firm in New Orleans.

Wynn, a 1951 graduate of Illinois, and his wife, Bobby, have three children—Ron, Susan, and Nancy.

TIPS ON SHOOTING SPORTS

THE RIGHT LENS FOR THE ULTIMATE SHOT

Picture this. It's fourth down and goal to go with four seconds on the clock. The 49ers need the touchdown for the win. An anxious crowd is on its feet in one loyal, harmonious roar. Quarterback Joe Montana motions for quiet. He takes the snap, fades back, quickly checks his receivers, and fires a ten-yard bullet to Jerry Rice, who executes a spectacular mid-air grab between two Bronco defenders, to win the Super Bowl. Pandemonium breaks loose as the entranced 49ers smother Rice in victorious jubilation.

This is sports excitement at its best. And what's also exciting is that with a 35mm autofocus SLR camera and the proper lenses, this dramatic moment in sports history could be recorded in a range of photos that will capture the full power, action, and emotion of the event. Choosing the right lens for the job isn't difficult, once you know the facts. Here are some important lens tips that will let you get the most memorable sports photographs.

To begin, there are three major lens types. Normal, wide angle, and telephoto. A 35mm autofocus SLR will accept them all. A 50mm or "normal" lens sees just about what your eyes see, with no increase or decrease in magnification. It is fine for general all-around photography. But for the fast-paced action of sports you'll need more versatility.

A wide angle lens takes in a greater field of view. A 24mm, 28mm, or 35mm wide angle lens would allow you to photograph the entire 49ers/Broncos line of scrimmage in one frame, with edge-to-edge sharpness. When you're working in tight quarters, a wide angle lens is worth its weight in gold.

For close-ups, you could use a telephoto lens. A telephoto lens has a high magnification and lets you isolate a particular subject, while providing an additional benefit. Its shallow depth of field will render a distracting background out of focus, thereby concentrating all the emphasis on that subject. You could fill the entire frame with that shot of Joe Montana as the ball leaves his fingertips. Focal lengths of 200mm or 300mm would be ideal. Since telephoto lenses are susceptible to vibration, when using shutter speed under 1/500 sec., it's best to steady the lens as much as possible. One drawback of a telephoto lens is its fixed focal length and bulk.

For the greatest versatility and performance, a zoom lens will give you the best of both worlds, especially if you can't move around much. Zoom lenses are available in focal lengths that range from wide angle to short telephoto (28mm to 85mm or 35mm to 80mm), midrange (35mm to 105mm), or short telephoto to long telephoto (70mm to 210mm or 100mm to 300mm.). Today's autofocus zoom lenses give you unparalleled convenience in an ultra compact and lightweight design. A couple of these in your bag will give you incredible focal length coverage, and will not weigh you down. You could cover the entire winning play with wide angle group shots, close-up telephoto shots, and midrange action shots. All without having to leave your seat!

For photographing sports, a 35mm autofocus SLR camera along with the right lenses can offer professional-looking results right from the start. If you don't own one as of yet, do yourself a favor and make that initial investment. Many of today's SLRs offer predictive autofocus which tracks moving subjects effortlessly, programmed autoexposure with manual overrides, action-stopping shutter speeds, and quick and easy operation even for first-time users. Plus, some also accept the optional camera-programming computer software cards—an inexpensive way to expand and enhance your creative abilities. With this kind of equipment, the next time sports history is made, you'll have it as part of your own history-in outstanding sports photos!

Superdome Information

Welcome to the Superdome. We are pleased to have you as a visitor in the world's most magnificent and versatile public assembly facility. The safety and comfort of our patrons is our first concern. Enjoy your stay, and return often.

—Facility Management of Louisiana

FIRST AID: Report any emergency to the nearest Superdome user, security guard or policeman. The Superdome has a full-time clinic located near Gate F, 100 Level, behind section 133.

EMERGENCY PAGING: For dire emergencies only. Call 587-3663 and tell the operator the nature of the emergency, the full name of the person to be paged and the telephone number to be called. If you are paged during an event, go immediately to the Superdome Security Office in the Gate A lobby, ground level.

LOST AND FOUND: If you find an article, please turn it in to the nearest security guard. If you have lost something, the Lost and Found Department is located at the Superdome Security Office in the Gate A lobby, ground level. You can inquire about lost articles by calling 587-3663 and asking for the Lost and Found Department.

TELEPHONES: There are 100 pay telephones located throughout the Superdome at convenient locations, most of them in the main gate (A, C, E, G) areas.

REST ROOMS: The Superdome has a total of 88 rest rooms, located on all public concourses.

HANDICAPPED ACCESS: Special access, parking, seating and rest rooms are available for the handicapped. Please call 587-3663 in advance for further information.

HUNGRY?: The Superdome's restaurant (located near Gate D, 100 level) is open prior to and up to 30 minutes after most major Superdome events. There are also concession areas, nachos stands, popcorn stands, beer bars and mixed drink bars located on the 100, 300 and 500 levels offering a sumptuous variety of snacks and beverages.

WHAT YOU CAN CARRY INTO THE SUPERDOME WITH YOU: For football games—cameras, binoculars, small hand-held radios or TVs that can be placed in lap easily. (Note: earphones must be used with all radios and TVs; not all stations can be received in the Superdome.)

WHAT YOU CANNOT CARRY INTO THE SUPERDOME WITH YOU: Cans, bottles, containers or missiles of any kind, fireworks, weapons, contraband, airhorns, electrical musical instruments or artificial noisemakers of any kind.

PLEASE STAY OFF THE FIELD: Anyone entering the field level without proper credentials before, during or after the game is subject to eviction and arrest under Louisiana state law.

LEAVING THE SUPERDOME: You may not leave and re-enter. After the game, escalators will be turned off as a safety measure, and it is recommended that you use the walk ramps. All exit gates (A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H) will be open until 30 minutes after the end of the game; any remaining patrons at that time must exit through Gate A, ground level.

DAILY TOURS OF THE SUPERDOME: A "behind the scenes" look at the Superdome, including the press box, main arena, ballrooms and box-suite level, is available seven days a week (except during major Superdome events) at 10 a.m., 12 noon, 2 and 4 p.m. ■

LEADING THE NATION IN YARDS PER CARRY.

You've got the tickets, the team and all the right gear—picnic baskets and coolers, stadium blankets and more. Success is assured—if you can win on the road.

"Vanagon, get in there."

Excellent call. Volkswagen Vanagon is America's most spacious minivan—with more cubic yards of carrying capacity than the competition.

Vanagon has 34% more passenger and cargo capacity than Plymouth Voyager. And 32% more than Chevy Astro.

In fact, Vanagon seats seven and still offers three times more behind-the-rear-seat storage than Dodge Caravan.

"All right Vanagon, find some daylight."

Vanagon is shorter than a midsize station wagon so it gets in to some pretty tight places. And with power rack-and-pinion steering and four-wheel independent suspension, Vanagon gets out of some tight spots, too.

Handling like this contributes to Fahrvergnügen—the rewarding and distinctly European experience of driving a Volkswagen.

Prices start at $14,080.* And Vanagon Carat (shown above) includes air conditioning, automatic transmission, power windows and locks, and much more for just $18,670*.

"Sure, I can put you in touch with Vanagon's agent."

For more information on America's most spacious minivan, call 1-800-444-VWUS.

Or better yet, see your Volkswagen dealer and schedule a tryout today.

FAHRVERGNÜGEN. IT'S WHAT MAKES A CAR A VOLKSWAGEN.

Athletic Facilities

The new James W. Wilson Center for Intercollegiate Athletics will be flanked by the Goldring Tennis Complex (left) and the Ben and Lillian Turchin Baseball Diamond.

Propelled by a $25 million capital campaign, Tulane athletic facilities are undergoing unparalleled growth.

The campaign is spearheaded by Athletic Director Chet Gladchuk and engineered by Terry Terrebonne, executive director for athletic development. They have helped raise more than $22 million. More than $16 million has been raised in the last two years since Gladchuk came to Tulane.

"The response from our alumni and friends is pleasing," said Gladchuk. "But we're not going to be satisfied or stop striving until we go over the $25 million goal line."

Results of the campaign are the new buildings, from the $7.2 million, 76,000-square foot James W. Wilson Jr. Center for Intercollegiate Athletics to the renovated Avron B. Fogelman Arena for basketball and volleyball to the Bob and Lillian Turchin Baseball Stadium (about 3,000 seats and lights for night baseball), now under construction.

On the planning board for 1991 are the addition of a 3,000-seat grandstand to the McWilliams Track Complex and construction of the Goldring Tennis Complex.

Gladchuk calls the Wilson Center a masterpiece. It was scheduled for completion in late August and dedication on Sept. 22.

"It is one of the finest athletic facilities in the nation," he said, "the kind of facility that will send a clear signal to athletic recruits who visit our campus that Tulane has an investment in athletics.

"The signal is no different than the one sent by the business school or the engineering school with regard to first-class facilities. If we have top-grade facilities at Tulane, we will be in a better position to attract top students and athletes and achieve our goals in Division I-A athletic competition."

The first half of the Wilson Center, named for Alabama oilman and Tulane (B '57) alumnus Jim Wilson, was opened last year as home for the football team. The new half contains other coaching offices, meeting rooms, administration offices, a ticket office and the new Green Wave Sports Shop.

The gleam in Gladchuk's eye is the Tulane Hall of Fame in the atrium of the Wilson Center. Stan Kottemann has spent two years collecting treasures from Tulane's athletic past for attractive display in the Hall of Fame.

Befittingly, the new Wilson Center and the entire athletic complex is located on a street with a new name, Ben Weiner Drive. Like Jim Wilson and Kent McWilliams, Weiner is a shining figure among Tulane's athletic fund-raising luminary. ■

Help a college student who's helping herself.

Today, the high cost of college has forced many students to work part-time.

But for United Negro College Fund students, the struggle is extra hard. Half come from families earning less than $12,000 a year. Most expect little or no help from home.

That's why your help is so important. With it, we can keep tuition affordable for thousands of students like this one. Students who refuse to give up.

We're the 42 private, predominantly black colleges and universities of the United Negro College Fund. Where eager young minds study hard today, so they can make their own contributions to society tomorrow.

Help a part-time worker continue to be a full-time student. Send a check to the United Negro College Fund, Box C, 500 East 62nd St., New York, N.Y. 10021.

University Feature: Education No. 1 for Holman

By Shana Walton

These days, it's almost a cliché to hear athletes stress the importance of getting an education, but pro football player Rodney Holman (University College '81) practices what he preaches.

Holman, the Pro Bowl tight end for the Cincinnati Bengals, has been in school almost every semester since he earned his first degree in only three and a half years by going to summer school. He was drafted into the pros but attended classes between seasons to earn teaching certification in 1984 and a business certificate in 1988.

Now, Holman is debating whether he should enter graduate school in education administration or begin a new career in civil engineering — his first love.

"The way the job market is, you can never have too many degrees," Holman says. "Football is nice, but careers can end with one injury." Though he has never been seriously injured, Holman is planning for life after football.

"You have to be realistic," Holman says. "Football is a money game and a numbers game. What if there are too many people at one position? There are a lot of decisions being made.

"We try to create this mythical atmosphere of having fun when we play football, but all around you, it's a business — payrolls are being kept, concessions are being given out, there are box seats, players are cut checks. It so happens this is a business."

After being drafted, Holman realized the football was as much business as brawn and went back to school to learn the new game. "When investments come along or there's tax work, it helps. It helps eliminate the middle man," Holman says. "I at least understand the jargon and can make the necessary decisions."

Education is Holman's key to avoid being trapped into making a lifetime out of a sports career. He's carrying this message on what he calls his "lecture circuit across the lake," talking with school children in St. Tammany Parish. A Slidell resident, Holman coaches the students in self-motivation.

"I ask them, 'Would you want a person with a sixth-grade education to lead this country?' I then say, 'Would it be fair of you if you did not go on and finish your degree and then people depended on you to make decisions?' When I'm old and no longer functioning in society, I want quality decisions being made," Holman says.

Football or any professional sport offers no long-term answer for any student, Holman says, because the odds of being drafted are remote. For instance, only 12 people are drafted each year by each football team — a total of 336 for the 28 teams.

"It's a slim chance that you'll get picked for the team if you're a draft choice, unless you're one of the top three. It's a very slim chance you'll get picked if you're a free agent. It's a very, very slim chance that you'll ever get picked as a walk-on," he says.

"I tell the kids I'm not trying to destroy their hopes of playing. I just want them to know what they have to compete against."

Holman, who played for Tulane from 1978-81 and was named an All-American tight end, beat those odds as a third-round draft choice for the Bengals in 1982. He moved into the starting line-up in 1985 and last year saw his team go to the Super Bowl. Holman's football peers also picked him to play in the 1988 Pro Bowl: he was an alternate in 1987.

With all his success, however, Holman says his life might have been very different if someone had talked to him as an elementary student. "I might have made different choices," Holman says. "I might not even have played football."

Holman, originally from Ypsilanti, Michigan, says he came to college dreaming of entering a profession, such as civil engineering. But the demands of college football and what he felt was an inadequate academic preparation moved him into physical education.

"You can never have too many degrees."

"If I had known what would be required, well . . .," Holman says. "I really had to bust my butt when I came to Tulane."

Kenneth Wenn, Holman's academic adviser, remembers him as "a terrific guy," who overcame insufficient high school preparation by applying "the same hard work and dedication in the classroom as on the playing field." Says Wenn. "Rodney is a great role model for any student."

History professor Larry Powell, who had Holman in two classes says, "He was a good student, very bright."

New NCAA regulations are intended to put more emphasis on academics, but it will be years before the full effects on high school athletes can be measured.

Holman has mixed feelings about requirements that student athletes achieve minimum scores on the Scholastic Achievement Test before being allowed to enroll as scholarship athletes. On the one hand, he supports having standards, but imposing the same standards on all students is not always fair, he says.

"Some students haven't had the preparation; they haven't had the tools to work with, the educational background to score well on tests," Holman says. "Just because an individual is socially or economically underprivileged, however, that's not to say you can't tap that person's inner potential."

How old do you have to be to have a heart attack or a stroke?

Not as old as you think. It can happen to any one of us. In fact, high blood pressure is a major cause of heart attacks and the leading cause of strokes.

So if you think it can't happen to you, think again and do something about controlling your high blood pressure. Take your pills, cut the salt and watch your weight and exercise so you can live to enjoy a long life.

The Back Page

By Peter Finney

The game ball tucked under his arm, Bennie Ellender, Tulane class of '48, had made his way through the reception line, pumping hands and giving bear hugs.

He had walked past some squeezed oranges, a purple and gold sticking cap, two wrestling football players, a cluster of misty-eyed football players, several bottles of Cold Duck, yards of adhesive tape, and assorted bandages.

Now he was standing on the fringe of the bedlam, trying to convey his feelings.

"What can I say," mused Bennie, "except to tell you isn't it wonderful not to have to say 'wait till next year.'"

It was December 1, 1973.

Tulane Stadium was still rocking. The Green Wave had just beaten LSU, 14-0, before a record crowd of 86,500. Tulane Stadium had vibrated for Sugar Bowls and would vibrate for Super Bowls. It had shaken when John Gilliam returned the opening kickoff in Saints history for a touchdown and it had shaken when Tom Dempsey kicked his record 63-yard field goal.

But nothing registered higher on the ancient stadium's Richter Scale than what happened the evening Tulane's football team beat LSU for the first time in 25 years.

It was like being in the middle of a blender. Even though the wooden goalposts of the forties had given way to steel, they came tumbling down in what would be the last game played by the two rivals in the massive saucer on Willow Street.

Circumstances added to the drama. Seven days earlier, Ellender's Greenies had been embarrassed by Maryland, 42-9. Even though they were 8-2 at the time, they weren't given much of a chance against Charley McClendon's 9-1 Tigers who were headed for the Orange Bowl.

But, as Ellender would explain, "football teaches you to contend with adversity."

In this instance, it was a matter of emotion, preparation and ability coming to a boil. Against a team favored by two touchdowns, Tulane won by two touchdowns, the way LSU had been winning over the years: With defense and depth.

Both Tulane scores came when the second unit was on the field. The only score needed came on a pass from a sophomore quarterback to a sophomore tight end.

All evening long, it was Tulane forcing the issue and Tulane making the big plays — by Paul Brock, Mike Trapani, Dave Griener, and Rusty Chambers. On third and short and fourth and short, they stuffed the Tigers.

It was these kinds of defensive plays that set the stage for David Lee's interception of an overthrown pass by Mike Miley, which is what set up a touchdown strike from Terry Looney to Darwin Willie 19 seconds before halftime.

Just when it looked as though the half would end scoreless, Looney was scrambling 14 yards on third-and-10, something that symbolized what was going on.

In an emotional second half, the touchdown would hold up, but it wasn't easy. In the third quarter, the Tigers recovered a Steve Foley fumble at midfield and drove to the Wave 11. On third-and-seven, Mike Miley is rolling left with bloodhound Mark Olivari yapping at his heels. Olivari rode down Miley for a 15-yard loss, Juan Roca missed a field goal try and the stadium exploded.

Perhaps it was fitting that Olivari made the critical sack. He and Foley had begun preparing for the season as far back as January, running along the Lakefront. They were a pair that had a contagious effect on the squad.

Kamikaze efforts abounded. Rusty Chambers was in on 16 tackles. Dave Greiner, who had two interceptions, played with a bad arm. Charlie Hall, who made a key sack of Miley, played on a bad leg.

Charley McClendon accepted the historic defeat with class. "They wanted it more than we did," he said.

Betty Ellender said her husband was so confident she bought him an extra change of clothes to take care of a victory bath. It was a good move.

In the locker room, Ellender accepted telephone congratulations from colleagues Bear Bryant, John McKay and Duffy Daugherty.

He received a tearful embrace from his 74-year-old father who declared: "I've never spent three more enjoyable hours in this stadium."

That could go for most of the 86,500. Two hours after the game, many were still in the stands, celebrating. Many waited around to shake the hand of the head coach.

Bennie Ellender showered and dressed, emerging in his customary coat and tie. He was ready to unwind. He was still cool, still boyishly bashful.

And he was still carrying the game ball.

Next Home Game

One of the college football season's early surprises, the Golden Eagles of Southern Mississippi, invade the Superdome in three weeks.

USM is 2-1, with only a one-point loss at Georgia separating the Golden Eagles from a perfect mark and probable national ranking.

The Eagles have beaten Delta State and Alabama, and travel to Starkville tonight to face Mississippi State.

USM is led by senior quarterback Brett Favre, who's back in the lineup after missing the opener while still recovering from injuries suffered in an offseason automobile accident.

Saintly Hall

When Aaron Broussard, the mayor of Kenner, Louisiana, suggested a Saints Hall of Fame in 1983, he noted a few smirks. After all, the perennial doormats never had finished above .500. "Where are you gonna put it?"

the skeptics asked, "in a closet? Will it have the ten narrowest defeats in team history?"

But when the Saints achieved their breakthrough season in 1987, earning a playoff spot with a 12-3 record, the laughter quickly subsided. "During the winning streak," says Ken Trahan, the curator and manager, "the sponsors came out of the woodwork. Everyone wanted to be involved." And the rest has been Saints history.

The doors officially opened July 16, 1988. Located in the historic Rivertown section of Kenner, a suburb of New Orleans, the Hall of Fame is a non-profit venture.

The display items have come from more sources than the Mississippi River. "To this day," says Trahan, "I get people walking in here with something in their hand they want to show me, and ask me if I want to use it."
