Meyer Took Gators to Top, Sees A Program That Can Get Back There

Once he received the invitation to return to UF's campus and began to gather the specifics, Urban Meyer lit up over a single detail.

PROUD SPONSOR OF FLORIDA ATHLETICS

Meyer last coached the Gators 15 years ago, but once a Rocky Top enemy, always a Rocky Top enemy.

"The first thing I think about is Tennessee – we've got to beat Tennessee," Meyer said. "That's just the way I look at it when I first saw we were going to be invited back for the Tennessee game."

Meyer and his wife, Shelley, were eager to relive a Florida-Tennessee game at The Swamp and revive memories of Florida's domination of rivals during his six-year stint leading the program from 2005-10. Meyer went 6-0 against the Vols, and 16-2 overall against Florida's traditional rivals, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida State. Of course, Meyer (65-15) rarely lost to anyone while at Florida or anywhere else.

Before taking over the Gators, Meyer won big at Bowling Green and Utah, and after winning two national championships at UF and taking a season off, he won big at Ohio State. The 61-year-old Meyer won 85.4% of his games (187-32) and currently serves as a host and analyst on FOX's Big Noon Kickoff.

He took part in the show last Saturday morning, then caught a flight to Gainesville. Meyer's first Southeastern Conference game as Florida's coach came against the Vols, a 16-7 victory on Sept. 17, 2005.

Ask Meyer what he recalls, and you get a details-obsessed head coach's response.

"Every snap. That's when I was first exposed to the size, strength and speed of the SEC," Meyer said.

Meyer is undoubtedly one of the great college football coaches in history, winning three national championships and reshaping the SEC with his spread offense. He led the Gators to a national title in his second season with freshman quarterback Tim Tebow used in specialty situations behind starter Chris Leak, and in 2008 with Tebow as the face of the sport and the UF roster stacked with future NFL players.

A master motivator, Meyer did it with a relentless work ethic and program vision. He wanted his teams to be tough mentally and physically.

He pushed and pushed them to fulfill his mission.

"My focus is always on the human spirit as much as it is strategy," he said. "I know we introduced the spread offense to the SEC, and I had really excellent coaches, but I also pushed so much the mindset and culture of a program. That's something that I think is a difference-maker between a win and a loss.

"Most people run the same plays — it's getting people to execute at an extremely high level and give great effort. Giving great effort is all about culture, and it's all about motivation. We spent a lot of time on that."

Gators interim head coach Billy Gonzales played for Meyer at Colorado State and served on his coaching staffs at Bowling Green, Utah and Florida. He called Meyer for advice last month when he took over for Billy Napier with five games left in the regular season.

Gonzales is grateful he will be around for Meyer's ceremony on Saturday.

"I think of him as a mentor," Gonzales said. "I don't call him Urban. He's my coach. I call him 'Coach' if I see him."

Meyer hasn't coached since a short stint with the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2021, and he last led a college team in 2018 at Ohio State. However, he remains close to the game with his TV work and weekly podcast "The Triple Option."

Meyer knows the sport has changed with the introduction of the transfer portal, NIL (name, image and likeness), and revenue-sharing since he last coached, but he is confident his methods could still produce results.

"I think you have to adapt. I have many colleagues and friends in the profession still, and it's much different. But at the end of the day, you have to somehow get that team to play really, really hard and not be selfish, and that's probably never been harder," Meyer said. "But you see teams doing it. You see some teams playing extremely hard and very unselfish, so I'd do it somewhat similarly, but I think you have to adapt."

While Ben Hill Griffin Stadium looked much the same to Meyer, the program has undergone a massive upgrade in facilities since he coached the Gators. He has seen most of them and considers the program's modernization a plus in today's landscape.

Florida might be having a down season in 2025, but it is in no way out in Meyer's eyes.

"There is some transition going on," he said. "I think it's one of the best jobs in the country. I know they have gone through some hard times, but I think good times are around the corner. They have everything you need, starting with talent acquisition; it's all right there. They have great facilities, it's an elite academic school, great support, great town. You have everything you need to be successful.

"It's a great honor [to be coming back]. Shelley and I loved every second of our time there and love Gainesville."

Lambert "Jake" Jacobs worked until he was 81, was a successful businessman, and earned an accounting degree from the University of Florida in the late 1950s. He met his wife, Barbara, while at UF and the two married 68 years ago.

"Got married there right on 13th and University," Jacobs said. "It's no longer there, the little chapel."

Barbara Green Jacobs passed away in July, and on this November afternoon, Dirk Jacobs, Jake's son, has stopped by his father's place. Dirk and his sister, Jocelyn, are UF graduates like their parents.

"He and my mother were the inspiration," Dirk said.

Dirk recently reached out to Gators Boosters to let them know that Jake – that's what Lambert Walker Jacobs is called by his friends and family – has a fascinating story that few know and is believed to be the oldest living former UF football player.

Jacobs is also a U.S. Army veteran and is worthy of a salute, as the University Athletic Association honors members of the armed forces, veterans, and local first responders on Saturday during their annual "Saluting Those Who Serve" game against Tennessee.

Part of Jacobs' story is detailed in a book published by his late brother, Art Jacobs, in 1999. "The Prison Called Hohenasperg: An American Boy Betrayed by his Government during World War II" details the plight of more than 10,000 German-Americans during World War II. Jake's father and mother left Germany and moved to America years before the war broke out. Jake and Art were born in Brooklyn, N.Y., and were American citizens.

"They came over here for a better life legally and had him and his brother, and then everything else from there went on," Dirk Jacobs said.

When war erupted in Europe in September 1939, Jake's father, also Lambert Jacobs, complied with a government order as an unnaturalized German immigrant to register as an "enemy alien." That triggered a nightmare scenario four years later as the U.S. government ransacked the family's home in search of pro-Nazi activity.

The elder Lambert Jacobs, despite testimony from character witnesses and official recommendations that he not be interned, was arrested without formal charges or a trial, according to newspaper reports, and taken to a makeshift prison at Ellis Island. Eventually, Jake, Art and their mother joined their father there in miserable living conditions because they were rendered destitute by the loss of his income.

The Jacobs family was later moved by train to an internment camp in Crystal City, Texas, with Japanese, Italian and German internees. Once the war ended, the Jacobs family was sent back to Germany and held at Hohenasperg under the surveillance of the U.S. Army.

Jake and his brother, both American citizens, were released in 1946. Their parents were later freed and remained in Germany after the war. The brothers returned to the U.S. in 1947, with Jake settling with a farming family in Kansas that essentially adopted him. The family spent winters in Kissimmee, and Jacobs decided to remain in Florida one year when they returned to Kansas.

The decision opened a door to UF that Jacobs never imagined.

While enrolled at Kissimmee High, coaches urged him to come out for the football team.

"I had never played football," Jacobs said. "The first game I ever saw I played in."

Jacobs, a 170-pound fullback, suffered a fractured leg as a junior and missed much of the season. As a senior, he was a force for the Kowboys and made the Orlando Sentinel's All-Midstate second team.

Jacobs showed enough promise that his coach took him to UF for a couple of workouts. The Gators were impressed enough with his athleticism and toughness to offer him a scholarship.

Gators Award Grid Scholarships

GAINESVILLE—(AP)—The granting of University of Florida athletic scholarships to Lambert Jacobs of Kissimmee and Lee Burke of Chosen was announced yesterday by Athletic Director Bob Woodruff.

Jacobs, a six foot, 188 pound fullback, was coached by William B. Stephens of Osceola High School and won places on the All Mid State and All Conference teams of his area. Burke, a six foot, 195 pound guard, graduated from Belle Glade High School and is now attending Georgia Military College.

A news clipping from the Feb. 25, 1951, edition of the Daytona Beach News-Journal. (Via Newspapers.com)

"I had interest from the University of Miami and Clemson," Jacobs said. "I never went to either one of them. When I went up to Gainesville, I said, 'This is the place I want to be,' because it was close to Kissimmee. I had a scholarship. I wouldn't have been able to go [without it]."

"I gotta tell you, I learned right away about keeping my head down, because they showed you their forearms, and we had no masks. When I was there, Bob Woodruff was the coach. Never spoke one word to him while I was there. All he was interested in was the first-string players. I was not first-string."

Jacobs played on the junior varsity and practiced with the varsity. He was part of the 1951-53 teams, including the 1952 team that defeated Tulsa in the Gator Bowl for UF's first bowl victory. Future Gators head coach Doug Dickey was the quarterback, and future NFL running back Rick Cesares was the star player.

Far from a star player, Jacobs acclimated to his new life and team. But he was struggling in school and financially without family support.

"In my fourth year, I dropped out because my grades were so poor," he said. "When I came back, I went in on the GI Bill."

Despite his traumatic experience during WWII, Jacobs enrolled in the U.S. Army after leaving UF and served 21 months on Okinawa. When he returned to campus, he met Barbara on a blind date. Gators center Carroll McDonald, a former teammate of Jacobs, served as a groomsman at their wedding. He earned his accounting degree and took a job with a textile company in LaGrange, Ga., embarking on what would become a long and successful career in the business world.

Jacobs was transferred from Dallas to Miami in 1967 for work and has remained there ever since. He continued to make trips to Ben Hill Griffin Stadium for Gators games as recently as 2008, watching the Gators beat Miami on the way to their last national championship.

He remembers a much different time and UF from what he only sees today on TV.

"They had wooden stadium seats," he said of his playing days. "They didn't have the upper decks. We practiced running up and down the concrete steps. There was no separate facility other than going over to the Florida Gym."

Lambert Walker Jacobs – Jake to those who know him – could be bitter about what happened to him and his family when he was a boy. He is not. He considers himself fortunate to have made it back to America and to have discovered his wife and future while at UF.

"It was just never a focus with him," Dirk Jacobs said.

Instead, Jake moved on and made a life. A good life. One that, at age 94, included an unexpected conversation about his days as a Gators football player so many decades ago.

"I practiced, but that was about it," he said. "I could hold my own. Back then, the larger guys were 225 pounds. That's what I wanted to be, but I could never get there."

He made it a lot farther.
